COAL POLICE ACQUITTED OF BORKOWSKI MURDER

Today

Intellectual America.
Valuable Lives.
Where Does Russia Get It?
Mexican News, Good, Bad.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

INTELLECTUAL Americans on Thursday paid $300,000 to see Mr. Tom Loughran fight Mr. Jack Sharkey, a Lithuanian who borrows his fighting name.

The gentlemen, who are "heavyweights" in more sense than one, fought three rounds. Sharkey won. Mr. Loughran "technically knocked out."

THE same crowd will pay $300,000 more, later, to see them fight three more rounds, with Mr. Loughran winning.

After that will come the deciding match. Sad, dull days for those that crave brutality.

OF ALL big business, life insurance is biggest. Frederick H. Ecker, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, predicts an increase in life insurance from one hundred to two hundred billions by 1940, while discussing problems involved in the investment of fourteen thousand million dollars, held in trust for policyholders.

TWO HUNDRED BILLION DOLLARS insurance on the people of the United States seems gigantic. But it averages less than $2,000 per inhabitant. It's a poor American that isn't worth more than that.

OUR high financial powers refuse to recognize Russia's government and that government, unconcerned, continues to show that it understands business.

Even American business might learn some things from Russia.

In the coming year the Soviet government plans to spend six and a half billion dollars on new buildings, industrial plants, factories, power stations, dwellings, schools, large state farms.

LIKE Mexico, Russia emphasizes especially the importance of more schools.

Wall Street must wonder where the Soviets can find six thousand five hundred million dollars, while our high finance holds thumbs down.

TWO pieces of Mexican news, one good, one bad, for Mexico's people. With excellent intention, Mexico plans to let Mexican labor raise itself by its own bootstraps. That is the bad news.

Employers hiring more than 20 workers must make collective contracts, with all.

An employer, for any reason letting men go, even closing down for lack of business, must continue paying wages for three months.

SUCH laws, if established, would drive capital and prosperity out of Mexico.

It would expel the only automobile factory in Mexico, which belongs to Henry Ford.

MEXICO'S good news tells that the number of her schools has doubled within a year. The government plans public school education for every child, on the American plan.

ONE year ago Mexico had 3,392 schools in rural communities. Now these schools number 6,073.

The children of peons and their parents are educated at the public expense.

MEXICO goes this country one step better by establishing rural open air theaters, where the population may enjoy, without charge, enlightening [illegible] amusing moving pictures.

THE crime wave that distresses this country cheers and saves a British manufacturer in Birmingham. He says: "If it were not for large orders from America, we should have to go out of business."

This Briton manufactures handcuffs.

Strangely enough, here we have prohibition, with crime increasing.

In Britain, with no prohibition, both crime and drunkenness diminish.

CESARE ROSSI, convicted of conspiring to murder Mussolini, goes to jail for 30 years.

Even if all his enemies say of Mussolini were true, it would be an unpatriotic blow at Italy's welfare, to endanger Mussolini's life.

Whatever history may say of him 100 years hence, Italy needs him now.

PEACOX, who strangled his wife, then poured gasoline over her body and set fire to it, possessed a lawyer who personifies Isocrates saying: "To convince others, be yourself convinced."

This lawyer told the jury he would stake his life that his client "never meant to kill."

If strangling a woman to death and then setting fire to her does not indicate intention to kill, what in your opinion would indicate such an intention?

MACDONALD OFF ON U. S. MISSION

Premier, on Way to Discuss Armaments With Hoover, Cheered by Huge Throngs

By ROBERT W. THOMPSON
International News Service.

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., Sept. 28.—After being delayed almost two hours by a heavy fog which came up out of the sea and enshrouded this port in a blanket of mist, the Cunard liner Berengaria, bearing Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald on his long-heralded voyage to America, got under way at 9:30 a. m., today.

The giant liner was scheduled to sail at 8 a. m., but at that hour the fog was so heavy it was feared the ship might not be able to start until the afternoon tide at 4 p. m.

The mist slowly lifted, however, as Premier MacDonald slept peacefully in the Prince of Wales suite aboard the liner, which in the days before the war was the suite of the former Kaiser Wilhelm when the Berengaria was the German liner Imperator.

Premier MacDonald was unaware that the elements threatened to

Daylight Saving Season Ends Tomorrow

Daylight Savings time officially ends in Pittsburgh at 2 a. m. tomorrow.

Watch and clock experts suggest that time pieces be turned on 11 hours rather than back one hour, as this, they say, is the proper way to adjust them without harm to their mechanism.

The operation before bedtime insures the desired effect, and does away with the necessity of remaining awake until 2 a. m.

In accordance with their semi-annual custom railroads tomorrow will put in new schedules placing all trains back on Standard time.

RACES FEATURE DEDICATION OF AIRPORT

Throngs Crowd Butler Field For Ceremony; Program Extended Over Sunday

Upward of a dozen commercial pilots from all over the eastern part of the United States, were poised at Johnstown today for a cross-country dash to the Pittsburgh-Butler Airport in the McEldowney trophy air race, the feature event in the second day's dedication celebration at the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation's new landing field.

The celebration will be continued over Sunday, with all the features which had been scheduled for the first two days.

Air pilots from a distance, it was said, would remain over for Sunday's stunts.

Low hanging clouds and fog combined yesterday to make flying a most hazardous undertaking, but even rain failed to dampen the ardor of the thousands who thronged to the new airport to witness the dedicatory ceremonies. With promise of clearing skies and little or no fog in prospect for today, Pittsburgh Aviation Industries officials were prepared to welcome the largest crowd ever gathered together for an aeronautical event in this district.

STUNTS SCHEDULED

Activities were scheduled to begin at the field at 11:30, with an exhibition of stunt flying by Army, Navy and commercial fliers. Band concerts interspersing the various events with the finish of the McEldowney trophy race scheduled at 1:30 conclude the first part of the program. The trophy for this race was donated by Robert McEldowney, of Johnstown, who also provided cash prizes of $150 for

'SHOCKING MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE,' SAYS PROSECUTOR

The three former coal and iron police charged with the murder of John Borkowski, the miner, of Tyre, are not guilty.

The verdict so declaring was read in Criminal Court today. The jury, which retired to deliberate at 4:14 p. m. yesterday, was reported to have agreed on the verdict four hours later after a few ballots.

There was no demonstration in the courtroom when the verdict, a surprise to many, was read. Two of the defendants, Walter J. Lyster and Harold P. Watts, turned and nodded to their mothers who were seated close behind. The third defendant, Frank Slapikas, sighed in relief.

Mrs. Borkowski, the widow, appeared stunned. Her left hand moved to her mouth, in an involuntary gesture. She stared at the jury of one woman and 11 men. Then she broke into sobs. Her young children and relatives led her from the courtroom.

ONE CHARGE STANDS

Attorney Charles B. Prichard, counsel for the defense, moved that an additional charge of involuntary manslaughter be dropped. Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk refused.

The verdict brought this statement from Clunk:

"This is the most shocking miscarriage of justice in the history of the county or anywhere. The people of Allegheny County read the evidence and can judge for themselves whether the verdict was proper. I am glad that the verdict is not on my conscience."

The defendants, no longer grim, were returned to the county jail until they are released on bond on the manslaughter charge.

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner announced after conference with defense counsel that the bail required would be $5,000 for each of the prisoners. The usual manslaughter bond is $2,500.

JURY APPEARED UNFATIGUED

The jury walked into the courtroom at 9:29 a. m. None of them appeared fatigued. Court Clerk Sam Mazer asked them if they had reached a verdict.

"Yes, they chorused."

And Stanley Sniegocki, foreman, arose to read from the slip of paper whose contents brought freedom to the three defendants.

In a low voice, barely audible, Sniegocki spoke:

"We find the defendants, Frank Slapikas, Walter J. Lyster and Harold P. Watts, not guilty."

A wide smile spread over the features of Watts' middle-aged mother, seated alongside the elderly Mrs. Lyster in the first row. Mrs. Lyster, worn by the testimony she

EX-ENVOY CHILD DEMANDS PACIFIST LOBBY EXPOSURE

HIGH TARIFF, WEAK NAVY, CENSURED

Let Shearer Tell All He Knows, Says Author; U. S. Victim of Foreign Gold

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD,
Former Ambassador to Italy and Noted Author.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—It appears Shearer will not be lonesone.

When the President dragged him out of the lobby box there was a country-wide demand to get everything out of the lobby box.

We all wanted to know how much our shipbuilders used Shearer as a lobbyist at the Geneva conference in 1926.

We all wanted to know what truth there is in the accusation that a "big navy" conspiracy exists.

We all wanted to know how much fanatic pacifist lobbying and press work there is behind the scenes to disarm the United States.

FOREIGN GOLD?

We all wanted to know how much foreign money and effort are being spent in working on us, on our merchant marine and on our Navy.

We all wanted to know how much avaricious lobbying is going on in favor of high tariffs.

So far we have heard little of what Shearer knows, and he may know a lot.

So far the shipbuilders' testimony has been frivolous and weak; it lets them out a side door.

So far none of these pacifist groups has been pointed out. They ought to be identified by the Senate and made to disclose their radical internationalistic affiliations and the source of all their funds.

So far we have learned there is very little justice in the idea that our Navy men are "Big Navy" men. They are a geed deal like all of us who want protection of our nation and commerce, safety from being caressed into bad bargains either as to armament or freedom of the seas for our commerce, and finally an honest reduction in armaments.

AGENTS PLANTED

So far we have learned little of lobbies, of sentimentalists and international bankers who preach war debt propaganda, or of profit-taking, but still hungry interests, who write their own tariff schedules and plant their agents in committees of Congress.

The Hearst press has been able to show that one Senator, no matter how innocent his motive, "looked after the interests of his state" by putting a high tariff agent at his own elbow to instruct him.

We want to know something more about whatever facts Shearer has. To make the question of his employment as an agent the main query is to overlook the chance to get out of him, if he has it, information about the real condition of our Navy.

If the shipbuilders employed him they must have believed he knew something about the Navy and about the mutual disarmament agreements and how they would affect our safety. Who cares whether we put Shearer in jail, even if we have the right. What counts in the facts he has to tell us before he leaves the stage.

Floyd Gibbons, the seasoned American correspondent, says of Shearer:

"I met him in Paris after the Geneva conference and again in Washington. I found him highly patriotic and interested in seeing that the United States established actual naval parity with Great Britain."

Wythe Williams, another correspondent, quotes Ambassador Gibson, who was our chief American delegate, as saying of Shearer:

INFORMATON ACCURATE

"Whatever criticism may have been levelled against the press of America on his account, all I can say is that the information he handed out was correct."

The incident is not about Shearer in any case.

The lobby box has its cover off! Any disposition of the Senate to pussyfoot around that box, now that President Hoover has started the ball rolling in it, will be recognized by the country as a desire not to know about lobbies and about propaganda campaigns.

We are about to embark upon two major pieces of statesmanship.

One is a naval reduction program—from which, sad to say, and dangerous perhaps, is the omission of agreement with the British as to what shall constitute freedom of the seas if a war comes, not with each other, but a war in which the British may hold the power to interrupt our commerce with her enemies. When we have limited our capacity to build, we have thrown away our only argument for our interpretation of freedom of the seas.

The other is tariff revision. In this there is one factor to which every decent American of any political party, or in any section, must agree. It must be an honest revision and not settled by furtive legislative agents.

The lobby box is OPEN.

Peace with an adequate Navy—a Navy not obsolete.

Legislation for our best interests in revenue and protection.

The exposure of anything Shearer may have said or done is only a seed in the garden. Let the Senate sow and broadcast all the seeds.

BUTLER AIRPORT RACERS POISED

first, $125 for second and $100 for third.

The race is open to all pilots and planes of any type. It is a handicap event, the handicap having been set by a committee according to type, horsepower and various other technical differences. Contestants were to be started at short intervals from the Johnstown airport, their time of arrival and departure being checked by the judges at the Butler field.

A special contest over a 48-mile course mapped out around the airport was scheduled for National Guard planes. Entries have been received from organizations representing four states, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and Connecticut. Several of these fliers arrived yesterday, but most of them were held at their home ports by bad weather. A trophy will be awarded to the winner of this event.

RELAY EVENT SLATED

Two other races, one a relay for two pilots and the other a handicap free-for-all, also were scheduled. The relay event is for OX-5 motors only and offers prizes of $250, $150 and $75. In the handicap event prizes of $200, $100 and $50 have been offered.

Out of the gray skies yesterday, Army, Navy and commercial planes of almost every conceivable type appeared. Two huge Army transports, a tri-motored Ford and a twin-powered Fokker, were the largest of the Army's representation. Two spirited little Army pursuit ships, a big Douglas transport and three Douglas observation planes made up the Army's quota. The Navy was represented by a squad of combat pursuits from Hampton roads.

Among the most interesting civilian ships were several advanced cabin models, one of which, a two-passenger sport coupe, was piloted by Russel M. Thaw, of Philadelphia. Blanche Noyes, noted woman aviatrix; Camille Vinet, of Johnstown, and Lieut. Harry Mills of the United States Army are among the visiting pilots.

SOCIETY REPRESENTED

Society, also, was well represented. Headed by Miss Betty Scott, prominent in Pittsburgh society circles, the woman's reception committee includes the names of women of social prominence throughout the Western Pennsylvania district.

A delegation of notables from Washington was scheduled to arrive by plane from the Capital before noon. Capt. Cecil Sellers, chief transport pilot for Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, flew a tri-motored Fokker to Washington yesterday. Among those expected to make the return trip today are Mabel Walker Willebrandt; William E. McCracken, former secretary of aeronautics in the Department of Commerce; officials of the Postoffice Department, and others prominent in public life at the Nation's capital.

Scarecrow Shot, Boy Hides Thirty Hours in Wood

TUCKAHOE, N. J., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—After sending a bullet through the straw-stuffed head of a scarecrow, 13-year-old John Dirocco, of this town, fled into the cedar swamps one mile south of here and remained there for more than 30 hours, believing that he was being sought as a killer.

He was discovered by a posse of residents from this town and taken to Mays Landing for medical treatment. He suffered considerably from exposure, but was otherwise unharmed.

3 MINE GUARDS ACQUITTED BY JURY

All Three Returned to Jail Pending Posting of Bail On Manslaughter Charges

'HAPPY,' SAYS MOTHER

Together, the two women left their seatsand followed the deputy sheriffs who guided their sons from the courtroom back to the county jail, which has housed them since February.

In the corridor the two women were surrounded by a group of spectators.

"Are you happy?" somebody asked Mrs. Watts.

WIDOW IN TEARS

Mrs. Borwokski, in tears, had left the courtroom to return to the farm at Tyre.

The jury by its verdict indicated its belief in the charges of the defense that the commonwealth's two star witnesses, John Higgins and Dr. J. M. Patterson, had not painted an accurate picture of the beating of Borkowski.

The defense maintained that Higgins was "the unspeakable falsifier" and that Dr. Patterson was incompetent because of his age.

"The jury was in thorough accord and agreeable to that verdict," declared Mrs. Anna Mars, 7408 Cchoyer avenue, Swissvale, only woman member of the jury, when she returned to her home this morning.

Although adverse to talking of the case, Mrs. Mars said to a Sun-Eelegraph representative, who had mentioned that the verdict was creating considerable comment that "people when they knew the other side would think differently."

The jury retired at 4:14 p. m. yesterday with final instructions from Judge James H. Gray.

The defendants returned to the county jail, hopeful that the jury would refuse Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk's plea that two of them—Lyster and Watts—be sent to the electric chair and the third, Slapikas, be found guilty of murder in the second degree.

There was no indication early today whether the jury had reached a verdict.

Slapikas, Judge Gray pointed out, was not identified as having used violence on Borkowski either at the Blussick home in Santiago or at the police barracks of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in Imperial.

Judge Gray instructed the jury on the various degrees of murder.

PRICHARD BERATES

The crowd that packed into the courtroom and corridor as the case went to the jury was the largest since the trial started, last Monday.

In closing defense counsel assailed the testimony of the state's two star witnesses, Dr. J. M. Patterson and John Higgins.

"The unspeakable Higgins is a falsifier," Prichard said, in seeking to discount the testimony of the man who told of Watts and Lyster beating the miner in the Imperial barracks.

"Dr. Patterson is incompetent," Prichard asserted, "because of his age."

It was Dr. Patterson who treated Borkowski's wounds and testified to Lyster's attack on the miner.

Clunk asked for the supreme penalty in his closing words.

"Show them," Clunk said, referring to Lyster and Watts, "the same degree of mercy they showed Borkowski."

The prosecution charged that Borkowski, visiting his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Blussick, at Santiago, was attacked there by Watts, who testified he had invaded the home to search for whisky for a liquor prosecution against John Higgins, a roomer.

Arrested, Higgins and Borkowski were taken to the barracks after a fight outside the Blussick home. At the barracks Lyster beat Borkowski with knucklers, a revolver and a strap in an attempt to force him to confess he had stabbed Watts at the Blussick home, the prosecution contended.

The defense charged that Borkowski had not been unduly beaten, that he was beaten by Watts, but only after he had stabbed the coal and iron policeman.

NASSAU, LITTLE BRITISH ISLAND OFF FLORIDA COAST

For three days the tropical hurricane that threatened Florida raged through Nassau, lying in the Atlantic about 200 miles off Miami. Twenty were known dead.

creased in velocity. The hurricane was located by weather bureau meteorologists at 9:30 o'clock last night 100 miles due south of Miami and 50 miles due east of Key West heading into the Florida straits.

Indications were that the "doughnut" was gaining in velocity around its center, and also moving forward more rapidly than at any time during the last two days. Key West was warned to expect a wind of 65 miles an hour velocity.

MIAMI IN DARKNESS

News that the violent storm, which has been felt at Miami to the extent of crippling the city's electrical system and throwing it into darkness throughout the night, had resulted in loss of life and heavy property damage came several hours after wireless communication had been established with Nassau for the first time in almost three days.

The dispatch gave the first details of the horror to which the island had been subjected for a period of more than 60 hours as the violent storm lashed at the Bahamas and caused untold damage and misery.

With the resumption of radio communication, efforts were made during the night and early morning to obtain new details of the storm's disastrous effects. Messages received by the Tropical radio revealed that hardly a building in Nassau had escaped damage, and that the "poor" sections of the city suffered to a tremendous degree.

Government buildings sustained heavy damage. The official residence of the governor of the Bahamas was reported to have been badly damaged by the gale.

NASSAU FLOODED

Nassau is flooded and has been in total darkness for three nights. Telephone communications are hopelessly disrupted, and the utter lack of reports from other islands in the group has led to fears that other towns and cities may have suffered similar or even worse fates than that sustained by Nassau.

The water system of Nassau, the dispatches stated, remains intact, but vegetation is "torn to shreds" and hundreds of persons have been left without roofs over their heads.

First messages from Nassau, capital city of the islands and a pleasure resort famous the world over, declared that heavy damage had been done. It was stated, however, that no loss of life had been reported.

A few hours later, however, came the tersely-worded dispatch telling of death, destruction and suffering which served to revive fears that this section was not yet freed from the menace of a hurricane catastrophe approaching that of last year and of 1926.

The dispatch telling of the disaster stated that the storm damage was "worse collectively than ever before, and that no building escaped injury."

The palatial yacht Montagu, formerly owned by the late Julius Fleischmann, but now the property of Barron G. Collier, wealthy Florida developer, was wrecked in the entrance of Nassau harbor, but the 10 passengers and 23 crew members were rescued by life lines thrown out from shore.

MURDERCASE ISSUE IN CAMPAIGN

Rothstein Slaying Will Play Important Part in N. Y. Mayoralty Election

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Tammany's acceptance of the case of Arnold Rothstein as an issue in the mayoralty campaign was met today by charges that a city magistrate had received a loan from the gambler, who was slain mysteriously in a hotel last November.

Soon after the announcement of District Attorney Joab H. Banton that he would ask a special jury panel Monday to begin the trial of George McManus for the murder, Fiorello H. La Guardia, Republican candidate for mayor, charged that City Magistrate Albert H. Vitale had received a loan of $19,940 from Rothstein.

Magistrate Vitale, of the Bronx, who is taking an active part in Mayor Walker's campaign for reelection, admitted receiving a loan from a corporation which was controlled by Rothstein.

VITALE AMITS LOAN

He denied that it was a personal loan saying it was arranged through a friend and he did not know until he received a check in exchange for a note for $20,000, that Rothstein was connected with it.

La Guardia made his statement regarding the Vitale loan after District Attorney Banton had denied that the papers in the Rothstein case would show that many men in political or public life had borrowed money from Rothstein.

The charge that notes and documents in the Rothstein files compromised men in political or public positions have been made by Richard E. Enright, Square Deal Party candidate for mayor, as well as by La Guardia.

AWAIT MILLER'S CAPTURE

Banton announced that he will call Enright before the Grand Jury to tell what he claims to know regarding the case and which he has claimed in political speeches has been suppressed by the authorities.

Previously Banton had said he did not wish to proceed with the McManus trial until Hymie Miller, who was indicted with McManus, had been captured. McManus is at liberty under $50,000 bail. Banton gave as his reason for immediate trial his purpose to "satisfy the public that no sinister influences have operated to delay his trial."

MACDONALD'S PARTY SAILS

hold up the start of the voyage, which is hailed as one of the greatest missions in behalf of Anglo-American friendship and amity in history. Extremely tired from the ordeal of undergoing the enthusiastic sendoff given him by the people of England, Premier MacDonald had retired early and slept soundly throughout the night.

Describing his trip to America as a mission aimed at "narrowing the Atlantic ocean," Premier MacDonald, accompanied by his daughter, Ishbel, and other members of his party, boarded the Berengaria at 10:30 last night. The trip from Waterloo Station in London to Southampton had been a veritable triumphal procession. Enthusiastic crowds gathered at Waterloo, at the stations along the route and at the pierhead here to bid the Premier farewell. Departing on a trip whose ultimate aim is reduction of world armaments, Premier MacDonald received a sendoff of unparalleled exuberance and enthusiasm.

The Premier had been seen off at Waterloo Station by American Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, members of his cabinet and Laborite leaders. Besieged by reporters and well-wishers, the Premier was generous with his remarks and optimistic over the outcome of his voyage.

WEARIED BY FETES

Arriving at Southampton, the Premier showed visible signs of the ordeal which the farewell had meant for him, but he went through the ceremony arranged for his benefit on the pierhead here with his customary cheerfulness.

The Prime Minister's party includes Sir Robert Vansittart, his principal private secretary; Thomas Jones, deputy secretary to the Cabinet; A. L. Craigie, head of the American department of the foreign office, and Miss Rose Rosenberg, personal private secretary.

Prior to his departure from London, Premier MacDonald was the recipient of one of the most impressive impromptu demonstrations ever accorded a political leader in this country.

Thousands jammed their way into the railway station and for half an hour the Premier talked to newspaper correspondents while the crowd sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and interspersed its singing with shouts of "good old Ramsay" and "good luck to you, Mac."

All along the line from London to Southampton, the Premier sat in his carriage and waved his hat to huge throngs massed on platforms.

Premier MacDonald is scheduled to arrive in New York on October 4. He will proceed immediately to Washington for conferences with President Hoover.

WOMEN CHEER VERDICT AS 'TORCH SLAYER' ESCAPES CHAIR

PEACOX GETS 20 YEARS TO LIFE

Jury of Married Men Returns Verdict of Second-Degree Murder Guilt in Five Hours

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Mighty glad indeed that he escaped the electric chair, Earle F. Peacox, 22-year-old radio technician and dance hall "sheik" who strangled his bride, Dorothy, on their first wedding anniversary, today made preparations to leave immediately for Sing Sing prison at Ossining where he must serve a sentence of from 20 years to life.

Peacox was found guilty of murder in the second degree by a jury of married men late last night after five hours and 21 minutes of actual deliberation. He had admitted frankly enough that he had floored his estranged wife with the butt end of his pistol on the night of April 21 last and choked her to death, but he had pleaded extenuating circumstances.

SILENT ON VERDICT

It seemed "Dolly" had riled him beyond words when she referred to his apartment in Mount Vernon as "the same old dump" he had hoped to effect a reconciliation. Hot words followed. They smacked each other and before you could say "Jack Robinson" he had her on the floor and was strangling the life out of her.

This correspondent stopped Peacox as he emerged from the court room, shackled to a deputy sheriff.

"What do you think of the verdict," he was asked.

The young fellow, a pretty cagy chap indeed, replied:

"I have nothing to say at this time."

Peacox had shown no emotion in court when the verdict was returned. He was deathly pale when he was led into the court room, handcuffed to an under sheriff. He quietly took a seat at defense counsel table, a few feet from where his mother, Mrs. Catherine Peacox, a stolid, heavy-set housewife, was sitting.

The jury filed into the crowded, brilliantly illuminated court room. Edward C. Rosmassler, the foreman, 56-year-old silk manufacturer, of Scarsdale, arose when the clerk of court asked the jurors if they had reached a verdict.

"We have," said Rosmassler. A death-like silence prevailed. "Guilty of murder in the second degree," said Rosmassler, a bald-headed, sharp-faced man, his voice resounding through the silent court room.

SENTENCE APPLAUDED

Peacox, who had not been asked to stand, sat unmoved in his chair. His pasty complexion seemed paler than ever, his heavy black eyebrows accentuating his pallor beneath the bright lights of the courtroom. His mouth tightened a bit but otherwise he gave no outward evidence he was affected.

Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, a fine-looking, gray-haired man of about 60, stood up and immediately pronounced sentence. Instantly there was a burst of handclapping and cries of "good" in which the voices of women and girls predominated. The judge pounded for order and looked annoyed. Two women were promptly ejected from the courtroom by baliffs.

Not far from Peacox's cell is the cell of Miss Frances Newman, his "girl friend," who has been held as a material witness for the past five months—ever since Peacox's arrest. She had made the mistake of agreeing to help Peacox with his "alibi." She was the Broadway dance hall hostess whom he associated with while he was separated from his wife. Frances is to be released shortly, and when she is freed she will receive about $500, or about $3 a day for the time she has been held. She plans to marry her "boy friend, Willie," and start life anew.

Members of the jury revealed they took four ballots. The first ballot was six for murder in the first degree, three for second degree and three for manslaughter. The second ballot was four for first degree, six for second degree and two for manslaughter. The third ballot was three for first degree, eight for second degree and one for manslaughter. The fourth was unanimous for murder in the second degree—a "compromise" verdict.

There will be no appeal from the verdict. Sidney S. Syme, chief counsel for the defense, told International News Service he was "satisfied." In fact, he regarded the verdict as a "victory" for the defense. His client had escaped the chair.

NEW AIR MARKS RESULT FROM CAMPAIGN

Washington County Forges To Front as Many Signs Are Completed in Tours

By MAX HENRICI.

Washington County is being air-marked in many places.

At Washington, the county seat, Parson's auto shop, 45 North Franklin street, has completed the painting of a sign on the roof.

It consists of the name WASHINGTON in large letters of aluminum paint, with an arrow pointing to the landing field at McGovern, between Meadowlands and Houston.

ELKS' HOME MARKED

Another new air-mark in Washington is on the Elks' home on East Maiden street. It was erected as a tribute to DeLloyd "Dutch" Thompson, prominent Washington Elk and pioneer stunt flier. Thompson was one of the first to demonstrate the possibilities of night flying and bombing during the war. An injury sustained when his plane cracked up several years ago has caused him to quit flying, and he is now engaged in the contracting business in Washington.

Over at Charleroi J. W. Berryman & Son have just completed a large air-marking sign. It gives the name Charleroi in letters 15 feet high in chrome yellow, with arrows giving the distance and direction to the nearest airport and also pointing to the north.

GREAT CARE SHOWN

The care taken in laying out this sign suggests that J. W. Berryman & Son are probably qualified for the Guggenheim Fund's certificate of distinguished service to aviation, signed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, which is awarded to those putting up air-marks complying with the Department of Commerce specifications.

What these specifications are may be found on application to the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation, Oliver Building, Pittsburgh, which is co-operating with the Sun-Telegraph in the campaign to air-mark Western Pennsylvania.

WILKINS OFF ON TRIP TO ANTARCTIC

Explorer Leaves New York On Second Trip Into Bleak Wastes of South Pole

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Sir Hubert Wilkins, accompanied by two aviators and an engineer, sailed early today on the steamer Northern Prince for Montevideo, en route to Deception Island, where he will begin his second trip into the Antarctic. The two planes which will be used on the expedition already are at Deception Island.

He said the purpose of his trip is to chart 2,000 miles of Southern Pacific Ocean and particularly a stretch of the coast never before explored which constitutes one-fourth of the whole Antarctic coast line.

HAS THREE PLANS

Three plans confront the expedition, the explorer said. One is a non-stop flight from Deception Island to the Ross Sea, or the planes may be carried by steamer 400 miles south of the island before starting the flight. The third contingency provides for flying to Hearst land, 800 miles south of Deception and starting the charting from there by following the coastline to the Ross sea.

TAKES TWO PILOTS

With Sir Hubert sailed Parker Cramer and Al Cheeseman, pilots, and Orval Porter, engineer. Victor Olsen, wireless operator, will join them at Montevido, where they will be met by a Norwegian whaler. A trawler loaned by the British colonial office will be at Deception Island to serve as a floating base and to move supplies from Deception Island to the permanent base which will be selected.

COSTE BELIEVED OVER SIBERIA

LE BOURGET, France, Sept. 28.—28.—(AP.)—If all is well, Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte in their big sesquiplane, Question Mark are somewhere over Siberia today, roaring on into the East in an effort to break the world's distance flight record.

At 8:16 o'clock today, 24 hours had elapsed since the plane carried its great burden of fuel into the air.

Under favorable conditions the Question Mark should have covered 2,500 miles in that time. No reports have been received since the plane passed over Cologne, Germany, but little anxiety is felt.

TOKIO, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Dieudonne Coste may fly all the way from Paris to Japan only to find he is a lawbreaker.

Neither the Japanese Foreign Office, the French Embassy nor the Ministry of Communications has received notification of Coste's plans to continue his long distance flight to Japan after he has made his great hop into Russia.

The famous French ace has failed to apply for official permission, required of foreign aviators when they fly over Japanese territory. Hence if he arrives here he will be a technical lawbreakr, although actually he probably will be hailed as a hero and receive a royal welcome.

2 'FROSH' HURT IN CLASS FIGHT

ZANESVILLE, O., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Two members of the freshman class at Muskingum College, New Concord, O., were brought to a hospital here following a class fight at the school Thursday night. They are Joseph Starkey, 19, Pittsburgh, and Ray McKinley, 19, New Concord. Starkey has a fractured skull and a broken right shoulder and his condition was said to be serious. McKinley also suffered a broken shoulder and a score of others were said to have received minor injuries.

The clash was said to have followed a "snake dance" on the campus with the freshmen and sophomores taking part. President J. Knox Montgomery severely censured the classes in chapel yesterday and announced that the "snake dance" must be abolished.

Joseph Starkey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Starkey, of 911 Chester street, Avalon. According to word received by the father from Mrs. Starkey, who is at the hospital, the youth's condition is good and no serious development is anticipated. Young Starkey is a graduate of the Avalon High school and entered Muskingum college two weeks ago for a business course.

Twelve miles from any neighbors, except a few occupants of a nearby camp, and out of immediate reach of telephones, they plan to enjoy a week's stay at the summer camp of Gov. John H. Trumbull, of Connecticut, father of Mrs. Coolidge. Their only adviser and handy man is J. W. Vandyke, Gov. REPUBLIC-UNION DEAL NEAR YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 28.—Negotiations conducted by the Republic Iron and Steel Company, for purchase of the Union Drawn Steel Company, Beaver Falls, Pa., one of the largest interests of its kind in the country, are nearing a successful conclusion, according to reports in this district.

Union Drawn Steel is among the largest consumers of steel bars in the country and draws its supplies chiefly from the Republic and Carnegie companies. Its acquisition by Republic will further fortify that company's position in the steel bar field, and will require later on additional merchant bar capacity. It will help to solve Republic's problem of keeping such capacity active.

Union Drawn Steel Company operates two plants at Beaver Falls and one each at Gary, Ind., Hartford, Conn., and Massillon, O. It produces cold drawn, turned and polished steel shafting, screw steel, electric steel, axles, elevator guides, rounds, squares, flats and special shapes. Control of the company by Republic is to be negotiated on the basis of exchange of common stock.

SERMONETTE

"A MESSAGE TO THE YOUTH OF AMERICA"

"The glory of young men is their strength"—Proverbs, 20:29.

By RABBI B. A. LICHTER,
B'Nai-Israel Congregation

The Book of Proverbs, from which this text is taken, was written by a wise man, King Solomon, whose life was rich and abundant in experience. His word is, therefore, authoritative, and we may well take it to heart. He tells us that a strong, healthy body is an asset, and the young man who is blessed with it may deem himself fortunate and glory in it. Ancient peoples admired sheer PHYSICAL strength. The Bible records the extraordinary deeds of the mighty Samson, and there is no doubt that in the selection of Saul as King over Israel, the fact that "from his shoulders upward he was taller than any of the people," carried much weight. Hercules was a mythical figure, nevertheless, the stories of his heroic feats prove that the Greeks gloried in bodily strength. We moderns may be accused of paying too high a tribute to physical might, judging from the universal interest created by a prizefight, yet, who will deny that a strong body is a real necessity in this busy and active life of ours? The young man who conserves his strength will be better prepared to do his work in the world.

RABBI B. A. LICHTER

There is, however, much more to our text. A good physique is a great desideratum, but with it should come something else, and that is INTELLECTUAL strength. When a young man has that, too, then he may well be proud. The youth should develop his brain power. He should add continually to his stock of knowledge. A rich and glorious heritage has come down to us from the past, in the great cultures of many nations. And to every young man, no matter how poor he may be, is given the opportunity for reading and study. The doors of our libraries and schools are wide open to all who thirst for knowledge. Let, then, the youth of America develop mental strength and vigor, and learn to think for himself. Mens sana in corpore sano, to have a healthy mind in a healthy body, should be the ideal of our young people.

"The glory of young men is their strength," their MORAL strength. Blessed is the young man who possesses strength of character, who is master of himself and his appetites, who does not allow his passions to make a slave of him. The world is filled with many a youth, who has a fine physique and a splendid mind, of whom great things are expected, but who turns out to be a failure, because of moral weakness. Samson, the man of might, succumbed because of moral weakness and met with an untimely and ignominious death. Let the youth of America take to heart the sage advice of Solomon and glory in moral strength.

Lastly, there is a strength that transcends all, the strength we call SPIRITUAL, in which the youth may glory. It comes to him who seeks after God, to him who has the love and fear of God in his heart. It comes to him whose life is filled with high and sublime ideals and who is not engulfed in the materialism about him, but who strives for the finer and more delicate things of life, who does not make a god of Self, but who devotes himself to the service of his community and his fellowmen. We often hear the cry that our youth is not interested in the things of the spirit. They do not care about the church or the synagogue. They are not concerned with prayer or their souls or with God. If that be true, then they are ignoring the mightiest source of all strength and happiness, the religious life, which gives us a power and a might that is priceless. "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth," says the ancient sage of Israel. Gather spiritual strength and courage now, in the days of thy youth, that Peace and Joy and Happiness may be yours in the years to come.

Willocks to Be Hosts at Dinner

DID you ever know of any group of Pittsburgh debutantes more widely entertained than this year's? Perhaps I should put that in the future tense, even though some parties already have been given for them. However, what I really mean is that the 1929 buds are going to be just about as busy as it is possible to be during November and December. It is hard to imagine when all the last-minute parties are going to be given. Hardly a moment seems left, even this far ahead.

Just yesterday I heard about another debutante party. This is a dinner which the Frank Scott Willocks, of Sewickley, are planning to give the evening of December 6, preceding the ball which Mrs. Douglas Stewart will give in the Pittsburgh Golf Club for her debutante daughter, Anne. The Willocks will have three of the buds as their honor guests, Anne Stewart, Mary Robinson and Peggy Milligan.

BUT the debutantes have not already monopolized the social panorama, for fall brides are still prominent figures in the social world.

And speaking of fall brides, I'm reminded that Margaret Heath Ramsburg, daughter of the Charles J. Ramsburgs, of Edgeworth, has announced her attendants for her wedding on next Saturday to Henry Gibson Carey Williams, Jr. Officiating at the ceremony at 7 o'clock in the Ramsburg home will be the Rev. Dr. Alleyne C. Howell, rector of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopall Church of Sewickley.

Harriet Nourse Ramsburg will be her sister's only attendant, and T. Walley Williams, Jr., will be his brother's best man. And the ushers will be Charles J. Ramsburg, Jr., brother of the bride; Charles Marshall Brown, Jr., and James Murray Carr, of Pittsburgh, and James Polhemus, of Bethlehem.

The bridegroom, I might add, is the son of T. Walley Williams, of Murdoch street, Squirrel Hill.

AND now to return to that ever-fascinating subject, the debutante, I hear that the Andrew Ellicott Maccouns, of Pittsburgh and Baltimore society, will give a dinner in the Hotel Belvedere, Baltimore, on December 2, preceding the first German of the Bachelor's Cotillion at which Martha will make her bow. Sharing honors with Martha will be her cousin, Martha Stockton, debutante daughter of the Richard Stocktons, of Princeton, N. J., and Hester Tomlin, another debutante, daughter of Mrs. Robert Tomlin.

MRS. THOMAS H. HESTER and Mrs. Owen B. Harmon will entertain with a bridge luncheon next Saturday afternoon in the Edgewood Country Club in honor of Miss Helen Donahoe, of Stanton Heights. Miss Donahoe's marriage to Charles McCrory, of Knoxville, will be solemnized October 10.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH C. ANDREWS, of South Braddock avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Andrews, to Grosvenor Brett Cramp, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Cramp, of Steuben avenue, Crafton.

MISS AUGUSTA A. WERNER, of North Highland avenue, will entertain at dinner tonight in the Pittsburgh Country Club supplementing the rehearsal for the wedding of her niece, Miss Mary Louise Werner, daughter of Mrs. John Werner, and Lawrence Hague Baker. The ceremony will be performed next Wednesday afternoon in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of the marriage of Miss Gladys Monroe Darby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles David Darby, of Fourth street, Aspinwall, and Edwin Donald Hayes, son of Mrs. James Rogers, of Rogers, O., which was solemnized Wednesday morning at 11:45 o'clock in the Darby home by the Rev. C. J. Thompson, pastor of the Aspinwall Methodist Episcopal Church. The bride wore beige lace and carried pink roses, African daisies and lilies of the valley. Miss Ann Gosset, of Brookline, as maid of honor, appeared in beige georgette and carried Pernet roses and blue delphinium. David Y. Hastings was best man. A breakfast followed the ceremony and later, Mr. and Mrs. Hayes left for a trip to the East and South. They will be at home in Meadowcroft street, Mt. Lebanon, after November 15.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES LEWIS CORDES, of Rocky River, Cleveland, formerly of Bellevue, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Martha Anne Cordes, and Peter Burt Howell, of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Howell, of Chemung, N. Y., which was solemnized last Saturday in the bride's home by the Rev. LeRoy Lawther, pastor of the Lakewood Presbyterian Church. After an Eastern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Howell will be at home in New York.

* * *

MRS. PORTER W. SULLIVAN is general chairman for the annual dance and card party to be given Friday evening in the William Penn Hotel by the Women's Aid Society of the Eastern division, Pennsylvania Railroad.

MISS EDITH HOOVER, of Sheridan avenue, whose marriage to Frederick James Reeve will be solemnized Saturday, was guest of honor at a bridge luncheon given this afternoon in the Garden Tea Room by Miss Dorothy Reitz. There were 14 guests.

* * *

MRS. HELEN KROSKE and Mrs. Anna Wood will entertain for members and friends of Steel City Chapter No. 341, O. E. S., Thursday evening in the former's home in Peebles street, Wilkinsburg. Bridge, "500" and Old Maid will be played.

IN honor of Mrs. Mary M. Foley, grand royal matron, the Amarath will give a luncheon Tuesday at 1 o'clock in the William Penn Hotel with Mrs. Veo Sohn as chairman.

WILLIAM THE SILENT COURT No. 299, Dames of Malta, will hold a card party in the Oppenheim-Collins auditorium Wednesday afternoon.

FLAG TOURISTS END PARIS TRIP

PARIS, Sept. 28.—With their trip around the world nearing its end, the four young people who are making the journey under the auspices of the United States Flag Association, expressed regret at leaving this city, where they are being entertained at luncheons, dinners and various gatherings in their honor.

At luncheon yesterday they were the guests of the French Union for the Rehabilitation of the Battle Areas. Here they were congratulated upon their conduct and told of the work that the society is now doing to rebuild the sections destroyed by the war.

The tea was given later in the day in the Rue Kleber by the Countess De Chilly, regent of the Paris chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The scene of the tea was appropriately decorated with French and American flags.

Today a trip through the Eifel Tower has been arranged, after which the party will leave for London. Next Tuesday they sail for New York.

The four winners are Mary McGonical, Troy, N. Y.; Alma Groves, Byronsville, Ga.; Merle Clarke, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Robert Sullivan, Syracuse, N. Y.

Royal Physician, Livingstone's Friend, Dies

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Dr. James R. Wadel Ward, one time physician to Empress Eugenie of France and companion of David Livingstone in Africa, died yesterday. He was 102 years old.

Dr. Ward's first wife, Emelia Bernadotte, was, he said, descended from General Bernadotte, aide to Napoleon and later King of Sweden. She died shortly after they settled here and some years later Dr. Ward married again.

Surviving him are five children.

President of Congress Honored

BEAUTIFUL decorations, exceptionally handsome gowning and a program of artistry marked the reception given yesterday by the Congress of Clubs for the president, Mrs. Ralph W. Johnston.

Mrs. Johnston, the board of directors, and two past presidents, Mrs. John S. Sloan and Miss Helen Grimes, received together against an embankment of tall palms and ferns. Sheaves of gorgeous dahlias formed the chief decorations throughout the clubhouse and each tea table was centered with a low mound of roses and other blossoms.

The program, which was the first presented by Mrs. J. Charles Wilson, program chairman for this season, and arranged by her and Elsie Breese Mitchell, music chairman, was given by Miss Janet Turner, violinist, who was accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Storer; Nancy Boyd's amusing little play, "Rolls and Salt," which Miss Helen Irwin read very delightfully, and a group of songs in Viola Karlson Byrgerson's lovely contralto, for which the accompaniments were played by Marion Clark Bollinger.

BOWS AND SCARFS ENHANCE THE NEW AUTUMN MODE

—Sketched in Paris—

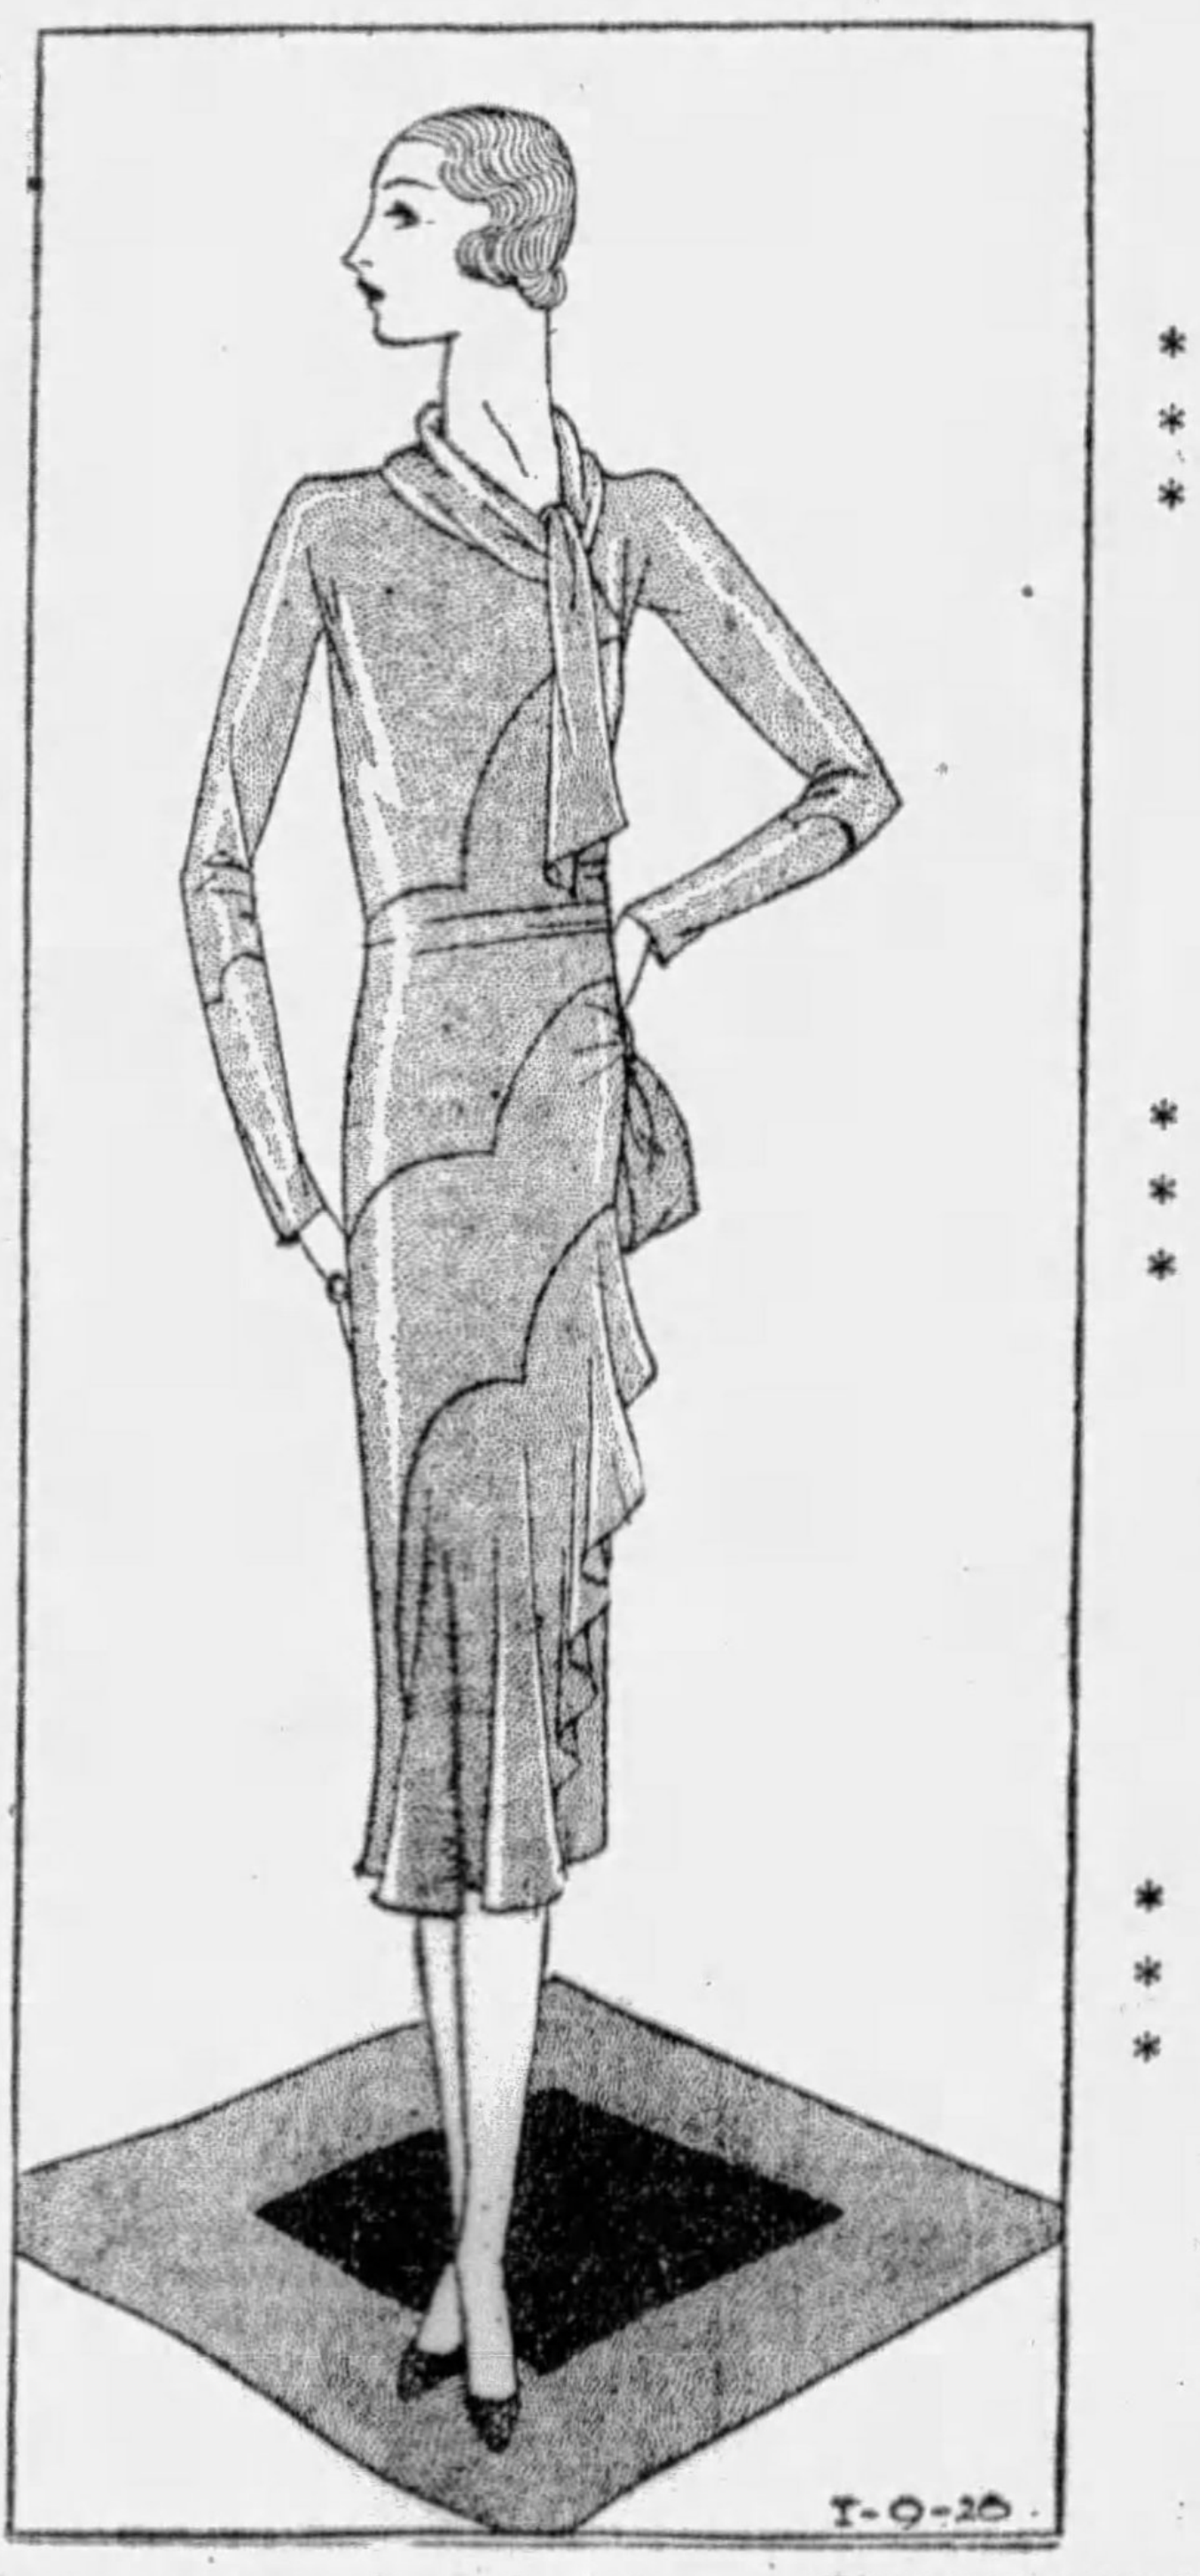
Satin Is Popular For Afternoon Frocks

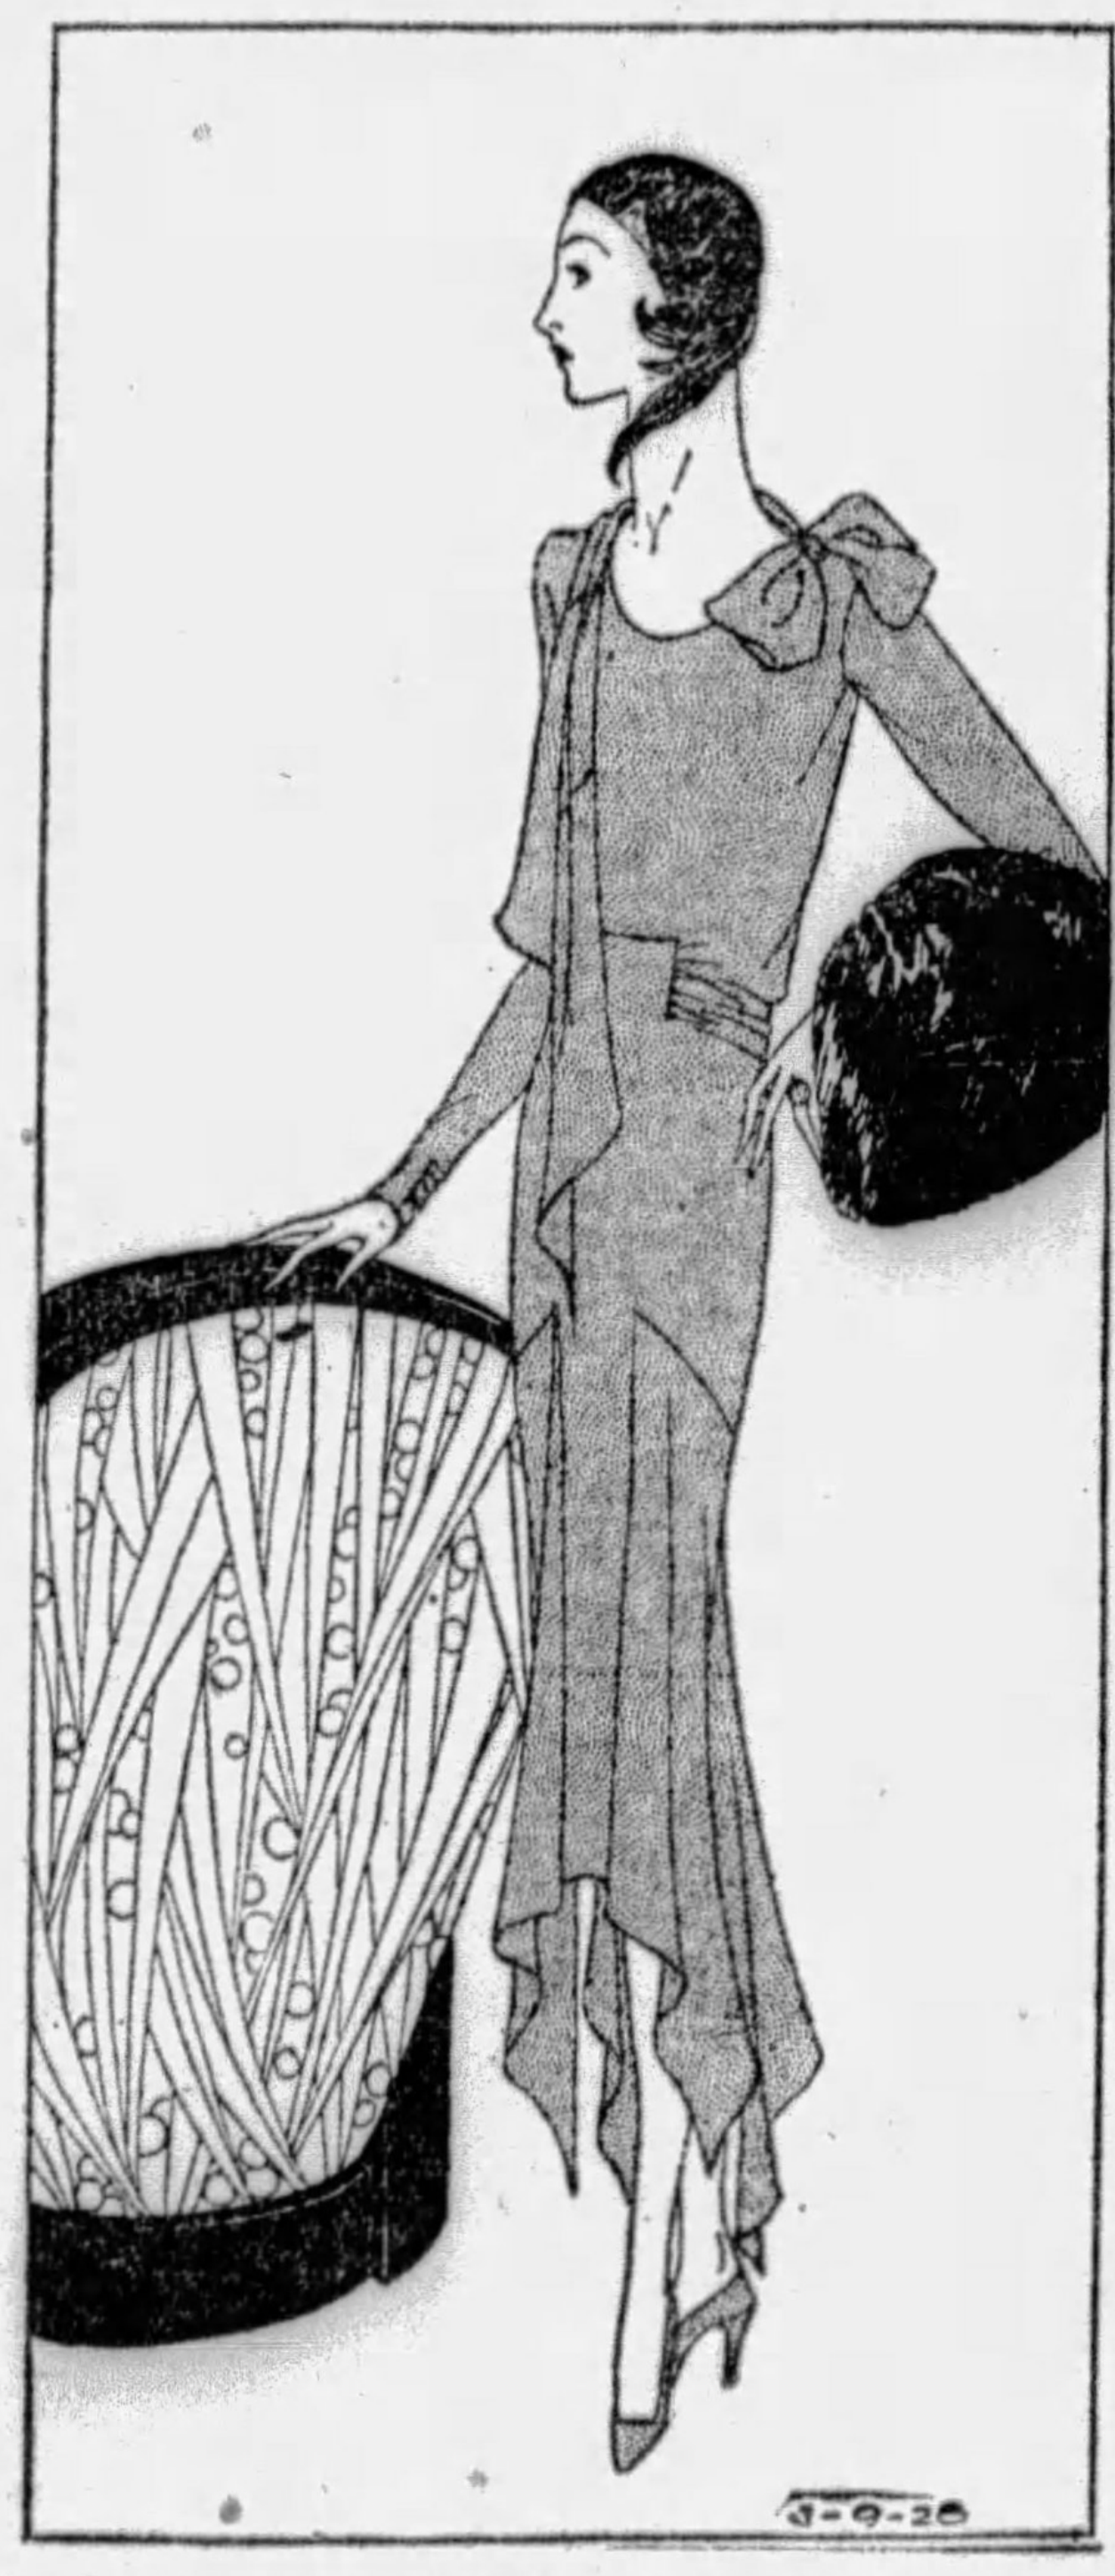
PARIS BUREAU,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Bow yourself into fashion with one of the new frocks that have bows or knotted bow scarves. Such dresses are proving a popular alternative to the gowns of untrimmed princess sihouette, that already appear to be just a trifle monotonous. Conformity to fashion does not mean uniformity in clothes. The well-dressed woman adapts the mode to her own personality, but does not slavishly follow it. This may be an old precept, but judging by the large number of incongrously but expensively dressed women seen season after season, it is not yet sufficiently well known, and so can stand repitition.

SATIN is an ever popular medium for afternoon frocks, and despite the favor shown to many new and beautiful fabrics, every house included many models in that material in its autumn and winter collections. In many cases crepe satin is used with alternating effect, but in all cases these dresses own no trimming but the self bows, or scarves of which we have made mention. From Lucile Paray comes such a frock in a soft tobacco shade of satin. The scarf collar knots at one side and the one-sided note is further stressed by the sloping piecings of both bodice and skirt, a rather intricate cut, closely fitting the figure. A decidedly circular flounce, falling in made godets crosses the skirt in the front only. This starts high up at the left side beneath a bow-knot of self material.

THE other gown is from Jean Latour, and reproduced here, because we thought that you would care to see one of the most admired afternoon gowns in Paris. It is of popular bottle green crepe-sokol.





COMPROMISE, that weapon of diplomacy, will be recognized in the waist-line position, for it is lifted higher than normal at the front, but dips down at the sides in draped folds. At the left shoulder is placed a bow-knot, the ends of which form a long scarf which is thrown over the other shoulder from back to front or vice versa, according to the wishes of the fortunate wearer. The circular flounce at the sides and back of the snugly fitting skirt is cut in points and is quite long. With the frock is worn a tiny toque of broadtail with coq feathers, and a muff of broadtail to match the hat.

NAME RECEIVER FOR CONNEAUT

The Conneaut Lake Company, which owns and operates an amusement park at Conneaut Lake, in Crawford County, as well as other interests, was placed in receivership in an equity suit filed in Federal Court by Ralph F. Hirsch, of Columbus, O. In answer to the suit, H. H. Denison, president of the company, admitted allegations of Hirsch that the company is financially embarrassed and joined with the plaintiff in asking for a receiver.

Judge R. M. Gibson appointed R. J. MacDonald receiver. He was placed under $40,000 bond and empowered to take possession of all the property of the company, make necessary repairs and continue the operation. Hirsch in his bill of complaint said that the property and assets are of such nature and character that for the security and protection of creditors they must be kept intact and maintained and operated as a whole.

Hirsch in his statement said the company has holdings appraised at approximately $1,000,000 and liabilities aggregating approximately $553,675.87, of which $432,440 of the latter amount is secured by mortgages on all or part of the property and assets.

The company has engaged for many years in the operation of the amusement park, and its general assets consist of large acreage of land at Conneaut Lake, a part of which has been subdivided into lots; business houses and places of entertainment. It also owns the Conneaut Hotel.

FUMES INJURED; $25,000 ASKED

Claiming that she was poisoned by the fumes of disinfectants, Mrs. Mary Jane Moran, with her husband, Robert Moran, of 1302 Buena Vista street, North Side, asked $25,000 damages from William E. Jahne, trading as the Keystone Disinfecting Company, in an action filed in Common Pleas Court.

A capias was granted by Judge Richard W. Martin and bail fixed at $1,000. Poisonous gases seeped through apertures in a party wall from an adjoining house which Jahne was disinfecting May 5 last and overcame Mrs. Moran, the statement of claim alleged. She has been confined to bed for a long time and her lungs and nervous system have been affected, it stated.

Suicide Attempt Ends in Failure

Archie Barakas, 21, of 810 Montooth street, who according to the South Side police, attempted to commit suicide by swallowing mercury tablets in his home Thursday, is reported to be in a favorable condition in the South Side Hospital. Barakas is charged with disorderly conduct, and will appear before Magistrate John J. Sweeney in South Side Police court when he is discharged from the hospital.

ALLEGHENY COUNTY
'Public Improvements Promote Progress'
Convinced of the fact that public improvements exert an important influence upon the progress of any community, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County on January 1, 1924, initiated a program of major public works, many of which are already effectively serving the citizens, while others of vital importance are being rapidly brought to completion.
Statistical records of one of Pittsburgh's Large Department Stores show that deliveries of merchandise to suburban communities immediately increase as soon as roads to the suburbs are improved. Good roads likewise permit the farmer to economically deliver his farm products to the city. They make possible suitable homes in the country for the men who work in our industrial plants. Good roads improve the convenience of country schools and lessen the upkeep costs of automobiles.
MORE THAN 400 MILES OF ROADS IN ALLEGHENY COUNTY WERE IMPROVED DURING THE PAST FIVE YEARS.

BOLT COMPANY TO BREAK RECORD

Local Organization May Report Greatest Share Profit in Its History

The Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Corporation is expected to report the largest net and gross income and per share earnings in its history. This is indicated by results of the early portion of the year and expected business for the last quarter.

Consolidated earnings of the companies which now comprise the Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Corporation reached their high point in 1926 and receded slightly in each of the two following years.

Fixed charges were earned more than nine times over in 1928 and were covered by comfortable margins in all years. The consolidated net income after federal taxes in the year ended December 31, 1924, amounted to $134,414, reached a high of $2,556,430 in 1926, and declined to $2,270,134 in 1928.

HALF YEAR

Net earnings for the six months to June 30, 1929 were $1,668,477 or at the annual rate of $2.22 a share on the common stock now outstanding, as against $1.51 a share in 1928 and $1.70 a share in 1927. Stockholders have shared generously in the earnings, and distributions now being made are at the quarterly rate of 35 cents a share, the last payment having been made July 15.

Five plants are operated by the company, all owned in fee, and equipped with modern machinery which is arranged in units or batteries to obtain a maximum of efficiency for mass production. A number of machines are of special design, built and patented by the company after years of study of the problem met within the industry.

FIVE PLANTS

The operating properties are at Pittsburgh, Neville Island and Monaca, Pa., within 25 miles of each other. Other plants at Gary, Ind., and Chicago, Ill., make a total of five sites with an area of about 90 acres. Buildings at these plants are principally of concrete and steel construction and have a combined floor space of 975,000 square feet.

As of June 30, 1929, the fixed properties were carried on the consolidated balance sheet at a net depreciated value of $9,061,370.

To an already diversified line of steel products the Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Corporation has added a new article known as Dick's hollow steel aeronautical propeller, the patents for which are owned by the company. Although quantity manufacture of the new product will not be begun until after January 1, 1930, it is expected that the output of propellers will result in a substantial addition to both the gross and net income of the organization.

Greatly increased strength and rigidity are the principal features of the propeller, which is made of chrome vanadium electric steel plates, so shaped and welded as to produce a hollow blade, and so that the weld does not lie on the blade edge.

MAKES HUBS

Hubs are also manufactured and are so constructed that the blades are adjustable without removing the entire propeller from the engine. Other patented articles in the roster of production are a self-lock patented nut, made in large quantity by the Graham plant at Neville Island, Pa., and a device for protecting the threads on the ends of drill pipe, tubing and casings made at the Colona plant.

SCREW, BOLT PLANT MAKING "PROPS"

MODERN PLANT OF PITTSBURGH SCREW AND BOLT CORPORATION

Some of the most modern equipment for the production of nuts and bolts is in use in this Preble avenue plant of the Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Corporation. In this factory, the company experimented with its recently perfected hollow steel airplane propeller.

GLASS MARKET UNCHANGED

With the marketing conditions in the several branches of the flat glass industry showing comparatively little change, interest among factors in the trade is centered chiefly in the meetings of both the manufacturers' and distributors' groups scheduled for this week and next, according to the American Glass Review.

On Thursday, September 19, the Window Glass Manufacturers' Association held an important meeting in Chicago. A discussion of prevalent competitive conditions and trade trends in general is understood to have held the attention of the membership.

The opening fall meeting of the eastern jobbers, the first since last June, will be held in Atlantic City Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week, September 25, 26 and 27. A strong program has been arranged and plans made for a large attendance of the membership.

Manufacturers of window glass report inquiries, as well as actual business at hand, in some larger volume this week. As yet, however, the expected heavy demand on the part of the jobbing trade has not materialized. Stocks in distributors' warehouses are far from top-heavy and, in a number of instances, are understood to be below normal. Consumption on the part of the building industry is soon to be at the year's peak, owing to the desire of contractors to close in buildings under construction before winter sets in. It would seem, therefore, that a pronounced stimulus in both the number and size of orders from jobbers may reasonably be expected by the end of this month.

Production of window glass continues at a low figure for this time of the year. Early next month, however, operating schedules will be augmented. Fires were lighted September 16 at the Fourcault machine equipped unit of the American Window Glass Company and the making of glass will get under way in about three weeks.

Demand for plate glass, as has been the case for some weeks past, continues uniformly good. Production is being maintained at high levels and is about in keeping with demand. While a reasonably satisfactory seasonal demand is reported in the rough rolled and wire glass field, the need of a firmer market is recognized by leading factors.

RETAIL TRADE GOOD, SAYS R. G. DUN

Seasonal Lines Moving In Greater Volume to Buyers, Agency Reports

Retail trade is showing some improvement, particularly in wearing apparel of various kinds, according to R. G. Dun & Co.

Wholesale dry goods houses are moving seasonable merchandise in reasonably good volume, and the demand for blankets has been quite strong. Millinery houses report business more active with felt hats in the cheaper grades in principal demand.

Jobbers of men's and boys' clothing and hats report sales slightly more active, but still not quite up to normal. There has been a slight improvement in the demand for women's wearing apparel, and shoes are also moving more freely. Sales of hardware have been in fair volume, although builders' hardware lines are rather quiet, as are also building materials, especially lumber, and brick. The movement of groceries and provisions is somewhat better than it was but still not up to normal. There is more active demand for jewelry and novelties.

OUTPUT UNCHANGED

The situation in industrial lines has not changed very materially, although steel mills are operating at a considerably lower rate than they were some time ago, the average apparently being not over 85 per cent of capacity, and orders are being received in lighter volume.

Manufacturers of electrical equipment are operating at quite a high rate, and have a fairly good volume of business booked. Sales of radio equipment are improving, and prospects for an active season appear to be favorable.

Inquiries for window glass are coming in more freely and volume of business is somewhat larger, but production continues at low rate for this period of the year. Production of plate glass is being maintained at a high level, with demand holding up very well.

There has been a rather sharp decrease in the production of crude oil due to closing down of certain fields. Prices show no particular change.

COAL IMPROVED

A slight improvement in demand is noted for bituminous coal, principally for domestic purposes, as industrial sources continue to buy sparingly. Prices show little change, with the exception that domestic sizes are somewhat stronger. Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted as follows, per net ton, at mines: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; steam slack, 50c to 90c, and gas slack, $1 to $1.10.

While collections show slight improvement, jobbers report the average to be still slow.

CURB ON BULL MARKET TREND EXPLAINED

Bearish Tinge Appears as Earnings Slow Down; Outlook Still Excellent

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—When a stock market reflects future hopes rather than established views, it is subject to varied and subtle influences.

In such a market, bearishness regarding selected stocks is conceivable even when the companies involved are showing an upward trend in earnings. If the rate of progression of earnings is not as rapid as expected, the trend is unfavorable from the standpoint of stock market prices.

These observations help to explain the present temporary check to bullish enthusiasm. Although general business is still excellent, activity has moderated slightly. The mere letup in the rate of increase was enough to upset the nerves of some in this new era in which stock values are metaphysical, rather than scientific issues. Somewhat unfavorable crop prospects seem to check the hopes for extraordinary seasonal trade increases during September and October.

Curtailment in steel, automobile production, and general construction during August and September have run contrary to the usual seasonal trend. These developments may halt the record breaking character of railroad freight car loadings.

SIGNIFICANT PHASE

A very significant phase of the business situation is the course of exports, which until recently continued in huge proportions despite abnormal credit factors. However, in August, instead of the usual seasonal increase, there was actually a decline, as the Harvard Economic Society has pointed out, our international position is unfavorable to foreign buying. Neither New York nor Paris, the two largest depositories of gold, are carrying out their international financing operations—New York on account of high interest rates ascribable to speculation and to Federal Reserve policy and Paris on account of obsolete taxes on long-term foreign capital issues.

The time has approached when business is feeling the effects of months of abnormally high interest rates.

Numerous British economists and financiers think it extraordinary that America should be harassed with high interest rates at a time when the country is glutted with gold. High interest rates are not needed to prevent commodity inflation. On the contrary, prices of non-agricultural products recently declined to the lowest level since 1925.

It would be prudent for our central banks to consider steps to ease the pressure which interest rates are making on business—especially on the export trade.

SPECULATION CURB FAILS

The justification for the rule of high interest rates has been a desire to restrain speculation, but the bidding up of stock prices continue in spite of high interest rates.

The increase in the acceptance holdings of the reserve banks has been largely offset by a decrease in the rediscounts of member banks. However, the recomposition of the portfolio of reserve banks is a step in the right direction, particularly since member banks lend more freely when they are out of debt to the reserve banks. With the seasonal expansion in business, member banks have been expanding their collateral and commercial loans. Present policy indicates that there will be no credit shortage during the fall period, but that high rates will prevail.

A moderation in the rate of business expansion is a sobering influence, which will tend to prolong the continuance of business activity on an active scale.

Americans paid the Federal Government in taxes $342,000,000 last year for the privilege of smoking cigarets. The rise in revenue from this source almost offset the loss sustained by the reduction of the tax on automobiles.

The bidding up of premier industrial stocks gradually tended to dry up the demand for them at prevailing price levels. The situation recalled the aphorism of the late William Salomon, who used to remark that the only crop which never failed was the security crop. The explanation of the recovery after sharp setbacks is largely to be found in the fact that investment buying has been repeatedly renewed at lower levels.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

STEEL DECLINE SEEN IN NEAR FUTURE

Future Comparison Will be Unfavorable, Judged by Current Indications

By B. E. V. LUTY

A long range viewpoint is required to obtain a favorable appraisal of the present steel situation. The short range comparisons are unfavorable because there has been a very special bulge in steel demand beginning just at the middle of last year. Comparisons, both with last spring and with a year ago, are unfavorable.

Reflecting a gradual decrease in buying for several months, steel production has been declining. At first it slipped only a trifle as there was an accumulation of shipping orders. In the last two or three weeks it has been declining more markedly and some further decrease is in prospect for the next few weeks. The rate of steel ingot production in the past week may be estimated at 15 per cent under the all-time peak rate of last May, which was practically maintained in June. The present rate is substantially the same as that of one year ago, but then production was increasing.

It follows that this September will show a gain over last September and that next month will show a loss from last October. September makes the eighteenth consecutive month for steel production to show an increase over the same month a year earlier, and now this charm is broken, but the break is due as much to the increasing production of a year ago as to the decreasing production of the present time.

TOTAL INCREASE

From a long range viewpoint, overlooking the special performance of the last 15 months, there is quite a different picture. It may be said that when steel struck its gait after the war it afterwards increased in tonnage 2 to 3 per cent per annum on an average. The first halves of 1923 and 1928 were of substantially equal goodness, so to speak, and in the interval of five years there was only a total increase of 7 per cent, and there were some poor spells between times. Constructing a trend line on that basis, production would now have to go down a few per cent to meet that line, whereas production has a right to go below the general trend line at times, as well as above. It is a pretty accurate rule that when it goes down it will come back, and vice versa, although not to the same extent.

Reverting to the nearby past, when steel was making an exceptional showing, industrial production in general as computed by the Federal Reserve Board was particularly heavy during the first half of this year, yet steel production was in addition well above its former relation to industrial activity in general. While the board's index of industrial production is adjusted for seasonal variation, it has been declining since June. Steel has a right to go along and should be expected to lose at least some of its extra swing above the general index.

DEMAND OFF

There is no specific reason for assuming that steel demand in all its parts has been decreasing. The observed decreases are special in character. There has been the usual seasonal decrease in rail production, several weeks later than usual. The agricultural implement industry, on account of only moderate crop prospects, is not running at the exceptional rate of the first half of this year on the second half of last year. The automobile industry, after its very notable showing in the first half of this year, is having somewhat more than its usual percentage of decrease for this time of year and will not have the pre-winter buying movement of preceding years, when so many owners were changing from open to closed cars. Finally, the freight car shops have been running out of their orders and the present car buying will hardly suffice to forestall some decrease in their operations. Fabricated structural steel, on the other hand, makes a very favorable showing as contracts have been coming in freely to date and the shops have more business on their books than early in the year, as shown by government statistics of their bookings and shipments.

Accountant

ROBERT L. WICKLINE

HEADS AUDIT COMPANY

Robert L. Wickline, suite 4150 in the Jenkins Arcade Building, is one of those capable geniuses who never seem to be too busy to assume important new obligations and discharge them efficiently.

Coming up from the vicissitudes of birth in a small country village of Ohio and battering his way to the top by sheer pluck and determination to succeed, Mr. Wickline today is recognized as an authority upon income taxes, business counsel and financial matters.

Mr. Wickline was born in Glasgow, Columbian County, O., the son of Joseph R. Wickline, now deceased, who was postmaster at the time, and was named after the then Mayor Robert Liddell, of Pittsburgh, a close friend of the family. His earlier education was secured at Bellaire, O., and Sharpsburg, Pa., supplemented by a commercial course at the Pittsburgh Business College, with special technical training. His first employment was with the Pennsylvania Railroad in Pittsburgh and for five years his work familiarized him with railroad operation and accounting. He next became accountant for the Peoples National Bank of Pittsburgh, where he remained six years.

This was followed by a period of work in insurance accounting and supervision until 1917, when he was called into the United States government service and became deputy collector of internal revenue, and successively internal revenue agent and corporation traveling auditor, achieving a meritorious record with the Treasury Department. Leaving the service in December, 1920, he organized the Corporation Audit Company, which since its inception, has included some of the largest and best known corporations as its clients.

He is a fellow of the Institute of Chartered Accountants, secretary and treasurer of the Standfast and Kroencke Company; secretary and treasurer of the Brookville Glove Company, Brookville, Pa.; president, National Extinguisher Company, Pittsburgh, and also a director in the Pennsylvania Lighting Company and the Dormont Building and Loan Association; vice president and director of the Pittsburgh Motor Club, and proprietor of the Wickline Insurance Agency.

About 25 years ago he assisted in organizing the Pittsburgh Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, and he is also an active member of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. He has written numerous articles on income tax problems, insurance, financial and religious matters, and has appeared as speaker on the subjects before many gatherings of national importance.

He is a member of the Almas Club; Pittsburgh Motor Club; the Syria Temple Auto Club; the Shrine Luncheon Club and the Keystone Athletic Club.

Nickel Plate Asks Approval of Notes

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—The Nickel Plate Railroad, controlled by the Van Sweringens, today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to issue $20,000,000 of short term notes with which to buy up certificates of deposit on the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad now deposited with the Allegheny Corporation, a Van Sweringen holding company.

Seven Figure Policies Held Locally

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

INSURANCE policies of $1,000,000 or more each are held by four Pittsburghers, one of whom is a woman. The largest policy on the life of a resident of this city totals $1,152,500. It is held in the name of J. Rogers Flannery. This information is contained in a tabulation of the largest life policies made by The Spectator, a business paper specializing in insurance.

Mrs. J. McCune, Bernard Davis and Thomas Gillespie each hold policies for $1,000,000. The survey shows there is a total of 285 policies for $1,000,000 or more outstanding. In the class of policies ranging from $50,000 to $1,000,000, a total of 14,000 business and professional men are protected.

Other Policies.

THE list of Pittsburghers holding policies for $50,000 or more includes 131 names. Among the largest policies in this group are ones for $610,000 for George Wittmer, Jr., $600,000 for Frank F. Nicola, $500,000 for Edgar J. Kaufmann, $458,246 for Clifford H. Beegle and $400,000 for Henry B. Rust.

Only 11 women in the entire United States are listed in the million-dollar insurance class. Leaders of practically every type of business endeavor are prominent. Types of business in which an exceptional amount of responsibility rests with a single individual have shown the greatest inclination to carry large amounts of insurance on their executives.

DuPont Policies.

THE most insured man in the world is Pierre S. du Pont. This family, with its vast interests in chemicals, explosives, paints and automobiles, appears to be one of the greatest believers in value of insurance. Mr. du Pont carries $7,000,000 in insurance. Lammot du Pont and Irenee du Pont each carry $1,000,000. Eugene du Pont is insured for $300,000.

Until about a year ago, John C. Martin of the Curtis Publishing Company in Philadelphia was at the top of the list. He now carries $6,540,000. The late John Wanamaker was, until his death, the world's most insured man. His demise cost the insurance companies of America $6,500,000. The late Rodman Wanamaker was insured for $6,000,000.

Insuring the Movies.

PERHAPS no other industry appropriates as much of its annual revenue for insurance as do the motion picture producers. William Fox is third on the list of the heavily insured; Joseph M. Schenk is fourth, Jesse Lasky is fifth and Adolph Zukor is sixth. These policies range from $5,000,000 to $6,500,000.

The enormous investments frequently carried by the producers on unfinished pictures, which would be made worthless by the death of a star, are responsible for many other large policies. Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Constance Talmadge, Norma Talmadge and Eric von Stroheim are all on the million-dollar list.

Shrinking Estates.

WHILE the protection of business associates explains many of these enormous policies, there is another important factor which influences the purchasing of insurance in large amounts. A survey of the estates valued at from $300,000 to $10,000,000 which have been settled in New York County during the last few years shows there was an average shrinkage of gross assets of 25 per cent and that this shrinkage amounted to 20 per cent of the average net estate. This information was given by Edward M. McMahon, insurance trust officer of the Equitable Trust Company of New York, in an address made before the National Association of Life Underwriters.

"In many instances," said Mr. McMahon, "an investigation was conducted into liquidation losses sustained by the estate and it was evident that these additional losses over and above normal shrinkage were incurred because the executor was forced to sell some of the best securities which, had they been retained by the executors and delivered to the beneficiaries, would have shown substantial enhancement in value today."

It is to provide against such contingencies as the forced selling of securities and to protect heirs during the period during which an estate is being settled that many of the million-dollar policies are being carried by individuals who will leave large estates.

American Ice Co. Increases Dividend

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—American Ice Company declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents on common versus 50 cents in previous quarter. Regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent was declared on preferred, both payable October 25 to record October 8.

Company reports for eight months to August 31, net income $4,109,486 after interest, but before depreciation and federal taxes versus $3,872,000 in 1928 period. August earnings were $920,217 after interest but before depreciation and federal taxes, versus $1,151,464 in August, 1928.

Fuel Dealers Ought To Sell Equipment

UPPER SARANAC LAKE, Sept. 28.—Coal merchants should sell "coal heat," which would require the merchandising of heating equipment as well as of coal, according to C. B. Huntress, of National Coal Association, Washington, who addressed the New York State Coal Merchants Association. He suggested that a committee of the national association of coal operators might approve such automatic devices, heat controls, ash removers and stokers, as are practicable and conduct an educational campaign to promote mechanical heating.

Rail Purchases Reach Normal Volume

The Pennsylvania Railroad's authorization to purchase 310,000 tons of rails for use in 1930 is only mildly favorable, say steel men. It is only 3 per cent over the authorization of two years ago, and with all the roads these rail replacements are a routine matter, annual variations being small. Ordinarily the Pennsylvania has promptly ordered two-thirds of its limit, reserving options on 50 per cent additional tonnage. The purchases, of course, have not yet been made. The annual rail-buying movement started no more than three weeks ago, and to date purchases by various roads as announced total 187,000 tons, representing some 10 per cent of the average seasonal movement, which is occurring at the usual time.

President

HOMER NEELY

SELLS OFFICE FURNITURE

Homer Neely, president of the Business Furniture Company, 950 Liberty avenue, is one of the city's executives who reached his position of responsibility solely upon his own efforts and in spite of a humble start and many adversities.

More than a quarter of a century ago, in 1903 to be exact, Mr. Neely began his furniture experience as a roustabout in one of the city's leading establishments at the munificent salary of $5 a week.

As time went on he worked into more responsible places and finally acquired some stock in the company by which he was employed, and became its secretary. Later, in partnership with Charles J. Lynch, now deceased, he launched his own furniture business and, when Mr. Lynch passed away in 1923, Mr. Neely assumed full charge of the growing enterprise.

The Business Furniture Company was established in 1913, with its first location at 623 Smithfield street, from which it was moved to Liberty avenue, and occupied successively 919 and 905 Liberty avenue until five years ago, when it was moved to its present location.

The company handles the products of some of the best known manufacturers in the country. The Art Metal Construction Company, the firm that put steel office furniture on the map in 1888, supplies the company with a complete line of desks, tables, shelving, safes and every type of equipment for the office. Horrocks Desk Company furnishes a line of wooden desks from the most expensive of matched suites down to the least costly. The company also represents the Taylor Chair Company.

During the years Mr. Neely has been in business he has been successful in establishing a reputation for integrity which has held his patrons to him year after year.

Personally Mr. Neely is well known as a member of the Rotary Club, Shannopin Country Club, the Keystone Athletic Club and the Chamber of Commerce and numbers among his acquaintances the best business and professional men of this territory.

HEAVY SELLING TURNS STOCKS DOWNWARD

Losses Common at Start; United Gas, Steel Drop; A.T.&T., Columbia Higher

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Large scale liquidation again made its appearance at the opening of the stock market today.

United Gas Improvement opened with a block of 26,000 shares at 51½, off 2 points, Underwood Elliott Fisher and Simmons also opened 2 points lower. Commercial Investment Trust dropped 1¾ points, United States Steel and Coty each 1 point. Some support appeared in a few issues, however, American Telephone and Columbia Graphophone opening a point or so higher.

There was nothing in the overnight news to cast any new light on the uncertain credit situation and market sentiment was obviously still shaken by the huge increase in brokers' loans. The week-end business and trade reviews were somewhat reassuring, showing retail and wholesale trade moving at a rapid pace, but still pointing to some faltering in the steel and automobile industries.

Support in leading stocks was soon withdrawn, and before the end of the first half hour of trading practically the entire list turned downward. The decline, however, was more orderly than yesterday. American Telephone soon lost its gain and showed a net loss of a couple of points.

Momentary strength was shown by such issues as American Can, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and General Electric, the last named selling up 2½ points then dropping 4. A few of the utilities were firm, Southern California Edison reaching a new peak at 92 and Pacific Lighting, Electric Power and Light and Louisville Gas selling up a point or two.

Renewed weakness in U. S. Steel was disappointing, the issue selling down nearly 4 points to a new low for the movement at 222¼. Motors were again under pressure, General Motors sagging more than a point to a new 1929 low at 66⅛. Auburn Auto dropped 15 points. Columbian Carbon, American and Foreign Power, Columbia Gas and Electric, North American, Macy and Johns Manville lost from 3½ to 6 points.

Foreign exchanges opened steady, with sterling cables at $4.85 5-16, up 1-32.

STEEL MARKET TAPERS OFF

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 28.—Immediate business outlook affecting the steel trade is not as bright as it was some months ago, and some curtailment may be expected, states President James A. Campbell, of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company.

"We hope to be able to operate an average of 75 per cent the remainder of the year. Conditions may be such, however, that operations will be forced lower," he said.

President Campbell states that the country must expect a slowing down in business, following the high rate maintained during the first eight months of this year.

"September business has been good, and better in some lines than in August, but it has already shown signs of tapering. Of course, the momentum at which business is traveling is sufficient to bring out new business for the steel trade, but in diminishing volume.

"The automobile industry is already curtailing. The number of cars in dealers' hands is very large. Conditions as a whole are not conducive to continuance of the excellent business we have been enjoying.

"All signs point to tight money conditions, and this factor is apt to hurt business to a great extent.

"While everything is being done by the government to help the farmer, I am afraid results will not be immediate. Elevators are still full of last year's grain, while a new and larger crop is coming in. The surplus production must be disposed of. It is a difficult problem. In the meantime, purchasing power of the farmer is impaired.

Steel Curtailment Seen by Campbell

James A. Campbell, president of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, says immediate business outlook affecting steel trade is not as bright as it was some months ago and some curtailment may be expected, says Youngstown Dispatch. He hopes to be able to operate an average of 75 per cent for remainder of year but added that conditions may be such that operations will be forced lower.

Building Activities Higher for Week

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—A considerable gain in building activity was noted last week in census bureau reports for territory east of the Rocky Mountains, though the new operations set on foot failed to equal in value those of the same period last year.

The figures which follow give the total of building contracts let in the area for the week and comparable periods: Week ending September 21, $21,743,000; preceding week, $17,617,000; same week last year, $32,050,000.

Week's Failures Show Increase

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Business failures in this country during the week totaled 428, an increase of 68 over last week's total, R. G. Dun & Co. reports. Failures for the corresponding week last year totaled 400.

MILD DECLINES ON LOCAL MARKET

Stocks Sag Off, Reflecting Continued Pressure on General List in New York

Stocks were unsettled during the short week-end session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, reflecting to some extent the continued decline in the New York market.

There was no unusual pressure on any part of the list here, but the recently active favorites in the fuel and industrial sections sagged off as traders lightened their accounts awaiting some definite idea as to the extent of the downswing in New York.

Lone Star Gas dropped back a full point after opening unchanged, while Western Public Service maintained a fairly steady tone. The newly listed Shamrock Oil fell a full point also. Carnegie Metals found bids scarce and was handled at 16 as compared with last night's close at 17¾. Blaw-Knox forfeited the gain made in the rally at the close last night. Engineering and Foundry was firm, scoring a moderate upturn in the initial trading.

International Rustless Iron maintained a firm tone. At the start the stock evinced an upward tendency, but the move petered out when the traders showed no inclination to follow.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 2 points. There was some buying on the steady showing of Liverpool and a moderate demand from the trade but the demand was supplied by continued southern selling and active months were about 2 to 3 points net lower at the end of the first half hour with December selling around 18.52c.

There was talk of trade buying orders in the market for execution at 18½ cents for that position, but there seemed to be very little support in evidence on the bulges. Uncertainty as to the tropical storm situation probably restricted the volume of business and promoted week-end evening-up.

Liverpool cables reported that trade calling had absorbed hedging and scattered liquidation in that market and said there was a fair demand for cotton cloths.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 160,000 bales against 102,000 last year and 188,000 two years ago.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 28.—Cotton, spot quiet; prices lower; American strict good middling, 10.96d; good middling, 10.56d; strict middling, 10.36d; middling, 10.16d; strict low middling, 10.06d; low middling, 9.76d; strict good ordinary, 9.36d; good ordinary, 8.96d. Stocks Now Show More Jumpings

By B. C. FORBES

THE stock market has become very jumpy. Most people don't now feel so cocksure that every time quotations drop, they will recover.

An Englishman, who had never been on a horse, visited an American ranch and, relating his experience on his return, said:

"They put me on the back of a deucedly clever animal. It kept pitching me into the air, but it caught me every time I came down—except once."

A growing number of people are afraid the stock market may play a similar trick.

BRIEFLY, call money has become scarcer, time money has become harder to find at even 9 per cent, brokers' loans have again expanded $192,000,000 this week, the Bank of England's advance of a full 1 per cent in its rate (to 6½ per cent) will not help our own money market, but may draw away funds. Fewer stocks are now shooting up sensationally and more have demonstrated that they can tumble headlong. The reluctance of New York bankers to lend money over the year-end, a new development, is viewed as ominous. Even investment trusts have ceased to climb all along the line. Durant and his cohorts are lying low.

But this bull market has achieved the apparently impossible so often that it may do so again.

STEVENSON E. WARD, a Mansfield, O., boy, who rose in 11 years from assistant cashier to president of the National Bank of Commerce in New York, at the age of 44, and who retained that highly important position until the institution was amalgamated this year with the Guaranty Trust Company, will, I am able to announce, become a senior partner of E. F. Mutton & Co., one of the foremost New York Stock Exchange firms.

Time was when the president of a big bank would not have dreamed of switching to the brokerage business; but in recent years it has been easy for stock exchange firms to make fortunes for their partners. Several other bankers have become brokers and have made far more money than ever before. A partnership in any leading stock exchange house yields much more than the salary of a bank president.

Incidentally, a recent reference by the writer to "live" stock exchange firms appeared in half-hundred newspapers as "livestock exchange firms," and promptly brought inquiries for detailed information. One cattle country reader writes:

"Being in the cattle business I know commission firms, but did not know there were exchange firms. Will you please give me the names of some and the exchange on which they operate?"

Will inquirers please note this explanation.

DON'T start spending the reported proposed income tax cut of next year. There's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip. And that cup is some distance off.

IN RAILWAY and financial circles they are likening L. F. Loree to the first dove sent out by Noah from the ark, which flew hither and thither, but could find no place to alight. His latest eastern consolidation plan is regarded as very much up in the air, entirely visionary.

THE New York money market is not helped by the absence in Europe of Charles E. Mitchell, head of the National City Bank. It was he who took upon his shoulders the main burden of striving to keep call money on a reasonably even keel, a thankless but highly constructive task.

SOME motor stocks, which formerly were going forward on high, have lately been thrown into reverse. Nor are they the only ones which have taken to acting disconcertingly.

COCA COLA NET UP SHARPLY

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Establishment of a new peak in quarterly income is now assured Coca Cola Company. Third quarter returns when published will undoubtedly show not only net but sales and gallonage disposed at peak for any three months' period in company's history. Net income after all charges but before federal taxes will total about $1,700,000 for quarter to end September 30, equal after Class "A" dividends to nearly $4 a share on 1,000,000 common shares outstanding. Previous quarterly peak was second quarter of current year when net totaled $3,937,333 or $3.18 on common. In third quarter of 1928 net was $3,915,677 or $3.16 on present common.

For nine months to September 30 net income should approximate $11,291,900, or about $9.04 a share on common. This is almost as much as was earned for full year 1928. Computed on same basis net for 1928 of $11,788,120 was equal to $8.78 on common.

Coca Cola is now paying common dividends at annual rate of $4 and with business expanding and earnings at a record level it is felt directors would be justified in increasing net return to possibly $6 a share.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Bond prices eased again today in a dull two-hour session of the market. Offerings of convertibles at the lower levels effected by the downward course of stocks were light.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

Stock Exchange Topics

Friday's Selling Movement Causes Brokers to Call For Margin Support.

MARGIN clerks in New York brokerage offices had their busiest day in months yesterday, working far into the night in checking up on the status of customers' accounts. Marginal balances had been regarded as ample until in the course of Friday's selling movement many of the leading stocks slipped through the levels which had come to be regarded as their resistance points. This naturally led to some marking down of stock values as collateral for loans at banks and in turn caused brokers to call upon their clients for additional cash to support their holdings.

Where additional margin was not forthcoming the "stop-loss" order was resorted to in a large way. And it was discouraged selling of this character that was effective in forcing stocks back sharply again in early dealings. It requires no stretch of the imagination to realize the disturbing influence exerted on sentiment by the spectacle of paper profits slipping away as rapidly as has been the case this week. In many instances the effect was to render what had looked like impregnably strong accounts a few weeks ago into rather weakened positions.

FROM a speculative viewpoint, the further slump in General Motors, this time to a new low for the stock on the present basis of capitalization, was one of the morning's most disturbing developments. Powerful effort was made to support that key stock just above the previous bottom of the year. It was evident as a block of 15,000 shares changed hands on the former low price, that a good deal of the stock hanging on stop-loss orders had been resting over the market in the hope that support might prove effective in checking the decline above that level was reached. As that large block changed hands General Motors slipped through to a new low, developing better resistance just under the old low.

Despite the poor showing made in the first half year by Endicott when earnings fell short of common dividend requirements by $949,209 it is not likely payments on this issue will be reduced or omitted. The company has built a surplus close to $15,000,000 and can continue payments for a considerable time from this account. Endicott's business since July 1 has perceptibly improved and is well ahead of last year. Indications now are the full year will show this dividend amply covered.

THERE is nothing abnormal in the current steel price situation. The industry is facing the same conditions it has been confronted with on numerous occasions when demand has fallen off. Leaders in the industry are not following the price concessions indiscriminately. In some instances they are not going out after orders as actively as they could. Some authorities point out that if those making concessions freely are permitted to take what business they can at present, the situation will adjust itself satisfactorily. Looking into the future, the outlook is decidedly gratifying. There has been a multiplication of evidence that railroads will be large buyers of steel. It also is felt that cars and locomotives will be ordered in large numbers. Structural work by railroads also should take big tonnages of steel in the next few months.

Even without sales volume of additional stores to be acquired this year, the 1929 sales of both Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward will reach new highs far above any previous records. Minimum estimates now point to gross sales of $425,000,000 for Sears and $310,000,000 for Ward this year compared to $347,000,000 and $232,000,000 respectively in 1928. If 1929 profit margins are about the same as in 1928, Sears' net income on gross sales as estimated would be almost $33,000,000, or more than $7 a shares on over 4,400,000 shares now outstanding, which will be increased before the end of the year by the 1 per cent stock dividend payable November 1. This would compare with net income of $26,907,902 or 6.28 a share on 4,284,418 shares in 1928. Ward's net income on the same basis would be about $23,600,000, equal after $7 class A dividends to about $4.80 a share on 4,620,769 shares now outstanding, including 1,141,251 shares not issued until late in August. In 1928 Ward earned $17,703,835 or $4.77 a share on 3,410,983 common shares outstanding at the end of the year after deducting class A dividends. These estimates do not include Becker-Ryan and Hartman figures.

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

PRESIDING at the trial of the coal and iron police, Judge James Gray experienced something new. A relatively new judge, this was the first time he was called upon to act as arbiter in a murder trial between biting prosecution counsel, Roy Clunk, and the dogmatic and scornful Messrs. Prichard and Coil, defensemen, two of the leading criminal lawyers of the local bar.

Havey J. Boyle

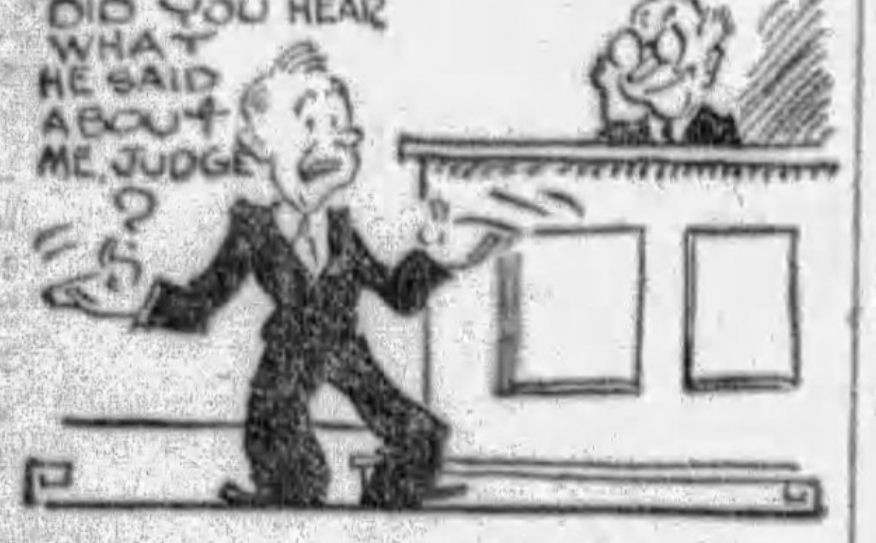
Sometimes a murder trial results in the end of a beautiful friendship between opposing counsel. While for the most part the biting jibes hurled across the counsel



DID YOU HEAR WHAT HE SAID ABOUT ME, JUDGE?

table are a part of the game, occasionally, as, for instance rumor has it in the current trial, opposing counsel get a real mad on.

THEY always are interesting duels, those wordy battles between commonwealth and defense attorneys at a murder trial. Each side feels the other has an advantage. Defensemen complain that the state has one or two bulges, a ready access to favorable witnesses, and the last crack at the jury. Commonwealth counsel argue that they have a hard time combatting natural sympathy for anyone in serious trouble.

The late Rody Marshall, of course, was the supreme actor in local murder trials over two decades. No Barrymore is more potent in registering the desired emotion than was Mr. Marshall. He had a knack of taking all juries into his confidence. Once in awhile he'd lose a big case—no first degree murder case that can be recalled now, however—but in the main the odds were on Marshall when he went to the post.

A SPY reports quite a bit of moving of household goods in the dead of night. He says that no landlord's warrant can be issued after 6 o'clock in the evening with the result that some of the customers figuratively fold up their tents and literally steal away to escape worried landlords who are wondering about the rent.

The strangest automobile driver in town is a local newspaperman, and it might be said, a veteran one, as he is now in his sixties. (He has been actively engaged in reportorial work for more than 40 years.) His uniqueness in driving comes from the fact that he always drives in second gear. While most motorists feel, somehow, disgraced when caught in second gear, our friend, the reporter, sees a great virtue in the lack of reckless speed to be found in second-gear driving. This is not the only thing that distinguishes our reporter-friend from the mob. At any age when most men have slid into a rut, our friend took up medicine, attended school and got his medical degree. He must have pondered seriously too, the old one, "Doctor, cure thyself," for his own health is perfect and although in his sixties he would pass for a man in his early fifties.

Will Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 28.

Say there is an awful lot in the papers the last few days about these experiments these college professors are making with rats. One professor had to turn his out, for the rats know enough not to try any of the experiments.

Another one wanted to find out what effect athletics had on anyone's intelligence. They wanted to see if he was dumber or keener after running back punts and tackling another rat for awhile.

The experiment showed that the rat was keener with athletics. By him demanding tuition and board for nothing and ten per cent of the gate on all big games, the rat with no exercise wound up as a bond salesman.

Yours, WILL.

MR. LODER PUZZLED BY VOICE UNTIL JEANETTE EXPLAINS IT BELONGS TO HIM

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1929, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 28.

ON a Pathe stage, John Loder and Jeannette Loff, bound for a set. A voice spoke from a projection room, "Wait a minute," puzzled Loder, stopping dead, "I know that voice."

"You should," agreed Miss Loff. "It's yours!"

Curiously enough, few if any people know their own voice. Hitherfore, pictures have taken voices for granted. Tone, pitch, richness—didn't mean a thing. Along came the deadly "mike." With it, fear. Not really for the mike. But the fear of getting acquainted with a "personalized" voice. The fear, whether laughing or serious, that prompted a player to deny that the play-back actually recorded his or her voice.

No Contest in Stone's Divorce

THE publik prints reveal that Lewis Stone is suing his wife for divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty. He goes on to say that Mrs. Stone, whose professional name is Florence Oakley, "lacked consideration for the plaintiff's feelings and sensibilities," was uncongenial in his presence, and subject to fits of anger, which interfered with his work and caused him "extreme anguish of mind and grievous mental pain."

Lewis Stone

Weeks ago, this department printed a story announcing the separation of the Stones. We mentioned that the separation occurred while Mrs. Stone was in New York arranging to put one of her husband's children in school. That, according to her statement to this scribe, she returned home to discover that during her absence East her husband had decided on the separation. Furthermore, that she subsequently suffered a breakdown and retired to a sanitarium.

Even as the divorce reaches the court, Mrs. Stone is confined to her bed with influenza. She is not contesting the divorce.

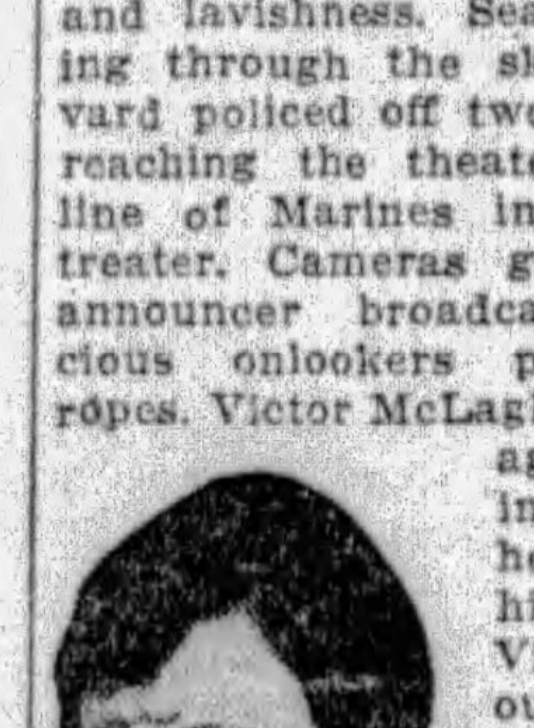
Many Celebrities At Film Premiere

SCREENALITIES: Raoul Walsh's "Cockeyed World" premiered 'tother eve at the Chinese Theater amid customary Hollywood pomp and lavishness. Searchlights poking through the sky. The boulevard policed off two blocks before reaching the theater. A colorful line of Marines in front of the treater. Cameras grinding. Radio announcer broadcasting. Loquacious onlookers packed behind ropes. Victor McLaglen's wife managed to return in time to see her husband do his Marine stuff. Vic has taken out his American citizenship papers. Mrs. McLaglen, however, must return to England every so often and reenter the country on a new quota list. 'Twas really a brilliant premier. Marion Davies arrived with a distinguished gathering of guests, including: the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, Maj. John Churchill, John Churchill, Jr., Randolph Churchill, Elevanor Boardman, Dione Ellis, Juliette Compton and others. Among those present also were Edmund Lowe and Lilyan Tashman; Bessie Love and Bill Hawks; June Collyer and "Buddy" Rogers; Lenore Ulric and Sydney Blackmer; Mr. and Mrs. James Gleason; Fanny Brice and Billy Rose; Lew Brice and his wife, May Clark; Mr. and Mrs. Allan Dwan; Cecil DeMille with his daughter, Cecilia; Myrna Kennedy and James Hall; Agnes Ayers and Lewis Milestone; Lila Lee and John Fallow; Hoot Gibson and Sally Eilers; Mary Astor and Kenneth Hawks; Catherine Dale Owen and Yucca Troubetsky; Anita Stewart and George Converse; Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Mayer; Bess Meredyth and Michael Curtiz; Louise Dresser and her husband; Carmelita Gerraghty and Carey Wilson; and umpty ump others. Um, and a good time had by all. "The Cockeyed World" is certainly a cinematic honey. After the picture, Mr. Walsh entertained at the Roosevelt. Judging from the packed condition of the room, Raoul host-ed to more than hundreds.



Lila Lee

New York Bound: Winnie Sheehan, Joe Schenck, Marilyn Miller, Viola Dana . . . The Fred Niblos entertained the visiting tennis stars 'tother day at their Hillside home . . . Ronald Colman, Mrs. Campbell Gullen, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Strange among the flick folk to drop in to see a week-day tennis match . . . Monte Blue's cracked ribs are getting along nicely, thank you. 'MAID' LEAVES WITH GEMS

Detectives and police today are searching for a "Miss Mary Mallock," who, they allege, posed as a domestic and stole jewelry amounting to $1,850 from the home of Morris Turner, of 325 South Negley avenue, yesterday.

According to city detectives, the girl, aged about 23, 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 125 pounds, and attractive looking, applied for the position in the morning. Mrs. Turner engaged her. The girl claimed that after the day's work was done, she would get her clothes from her home, "in Carson street."

In the early afternoon Mrs. Turner visited her mother, who lives next door. Returning 10 minutes later, the maid was gone. So was her jewelry.

The loot was taken from a dresser drawer, which was jimmied with a screw driver, police said. Finding the telephone wires cut, led the investigators to believe the girl was a professional thief.

The missing jewelry consisted of diamond rings, a diamond bar pin and a lady's wrist watch.

Boy on Bicycle Hit by Automobile

While riding on his bicycle on South Ninth street and turning into Carson street, early yesterday morning, George Truckun, 13, of 133 South Eleventh street, was struck by an automobile driven by Phillip Konopitski, of Elizabeth. At the South Side Hospital, attaches said that the boy was suffering lacerations of the scalp. The driver was not arrested.

Will Sing

Gloria Swanson is featured as a singer as well as an emotional actress in "The Trespasser," her new film. And to prove that she—and not a double—does the singing, she is going to broadcast a song program over the radio, in a nation-wide hookup, on October 10.

LAWYER DENIES VOTE OUSTING

Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay today denied that he had been ousted from the auditing room in the Court House, where public accountants are auditing the city's assessment books. It had been reported that Lindsay, after talking to clerks engaged in the auditing work being done for the grand jury investigating election frauds, had been told to stay out of the room.

Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park said that when he heard that Attorney Lindsay had been in the auditing room he issued a general order forbidding admittance to all except those employed in the auditing work.

Attorney Lindsay denied that he had been in the room.

Miss Dove Differs With Our Reviewer

Following is a paragraph of a letter to this department from Billie Dove relative to a review of a photoplay in which she appeared recently in the Enright:

"Being American born, I speak English with an American accent. When the part in 'Her Private Life' was given me, I explained to the producers that I would not attempt to effect an accent unless they saw fit to give me sufficient time to properly learn it. Since this time was not available, I made absolutely no effort to use one, feeling sure that no attempt would be better than a poor one. Therefore, you are in error in stating that I attempted a broad 'a.' Some day, I may try dialect or accent, and when I do, I will appreciate your suggestions and criticisms."

What do people of Pittsburgh who saw "Her Private Life" think about it?

Woman, Trolley Victim, Succumbs

Mrs. Rose Marie Pascario, 63, of 100 Elm street, died in the St. Francis Hospital late yesterday from injuries suffered Thursday when struck by a Frankstown avenue street car at Thirty-sixth street and Penn avenue. Her skull was fractured, according to a report to the coroner. The street car crew will post bond with the coroner today pending the inquest.

Accident Victims in Crash, Same Legs Rebroken

Two men released last week from Mercy Hospital, where each was confined with a broken right leg suffered in an accident, were back in the institution today, the same legs broken in an automobile crash.

They are Mike Pivera and Thomas Dwyer, of Mariana, thrown from the automobile when it collided with a Trafford street car at Forbes and Jumonville streets, last night. Edith Sarver, of 2007 Fifth avenue, who was riding in the machine, suffered several crushed ribs and was taken to the same hospital. Wilbur McChestney, driver of the automobile, escaped injury.

McChestney told police that he was taking Pivera and Dwyer back to the hospital for treatment of their injuries as had been suggested by physicians when they were released last week.

STAGE, SCREEN PROGRAMS CHANGE

Irene Bordoni, in "Paris," comes to the Shubert Alvin for a week, beginning next Monday night, marking the opening of that playhouse, in which extensive repairs have been made. Miss Bordoni is remembered for her performances in "The French Doll," "Little Miss Bluebeard" and "Naukhty Cinderella."

Lee Tracy, to be seen as Hildy Johnson, the ebullient reporter, in "The Front Page," in the Nixon theater next week, is the star of "Big Time," a talking picture of backstage life, made in the Fox Hollywood studio during Tracy's summer vacation. He played in "The Front Page" all last season and returned to his role in Washington last week.

"The Bad Man," comedy drama of the Southwest, former starring vehicle for Holbroow Blinn, will be the vehicle of the George Sharp Players in the Pitt next week. Thursday and Saturday are matinee days in this theater.

VAUDEVILLE AND FILM

New vaudeville and feature picture programs effective today in the Harris, downtown, and Sheridan Square, East Liberty, have Lola Lane and Paul Page, in "The Girl From Havana," as the principal screen attraction. Variety in the Harris, headed by Lou Parker, and in the Sheridan, headed by Victor Graff, includes four acts, different in each house.

Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe, remembered for their parts in "What Price Glory," will be seen as the same men on the Aldine screen beginning with a midnight show Sunday, in an all-talking picture, "The Cock-Eyed World." Lily Damita has the feminine lead.

Leatrice Joy is supported by Sydney Blackmer, Josephine Dunn, Walter Pidgeon and others in "A Most Immoral Lady," all-talking screen attraction in the Stanley. Brooke Johns presents "Jazz Static" on the stage.

OPENS THIRD WEEK

"The Gold Diggers of Broadway," Warner Brothers and Vitaphone's all-talking, natural color production, has been retained for a third week in the Grand, beginning today.

A baffling mystery forms the basis of "The Unholy Night," Lionel Barrymore's all talking Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production which comes to the Penn, Monday. Roland Young, Ernest Torrence, Dorothy Sebastian, Natalie Moorhead, Polly Moran, Claude Fleming, and others are in the cast.

The all-talking screen version of "The Great Divide" is in the Enright today with Dorothy Mackaill in the leading role. On the stage Dick Powell will head the presentation, "Jubilee."

CHARTER PLEA TO BE HEARD

The County Commissioners' appeal regarding the resubmitting the Metropolitan Charter Plan to the voters in November will be one of the important matters to come before the State Supreme Court for argument when the court convenes here Monday for its fall session in the Western District. The appeal has been placed at the head of the list of local cases.

On the list for the opening week are appeals from Armstrong, Clarion, Fayette, Forest, Jefferson, Mercer, Somerset, Venango and Westmoreland counties. A few homicide cases from Eastern counties also are listed for the week.

Markus, Brother Under Indictment

True bills charging aggravated assault and battery were returned by the grand jury yesterday against Alderman A. C. Markus, of the Second Ward, McKeesport, and his brother, Albert A. Markus, a private detective.

The same grand jury ignored a true bill against Attorney P. C. Patchman, of Braddock, whom Alderman Markus held some months ago, following a row at his office. The costs were ordered placed on the prosecutor, A. A. Markus.

Bergman Orchestra In Nixon Restaurant

Dewey Bergman and his orchestra will begin an engagement in the Nixon Restaurant, Nixon Theater Building, Monday. The floor revue will feature Nick Carter, master of ceremonies; Lillian Daley, prima donna; Don and Doresse, dancers, and Margie Young, novelty singer and dancer. Bergman's music in the Nixon will be broadcast by radio station WCAE.

WIDE FILM, DEPTH ON SCREEN

What is believed to be a step in the development of motion pictures as revolutionary as the introduction of sound a little more than two years ago, a screen as wide as the proscenium of the theater, was shown to the New York public recently. It is called grandeur film and is the product of three years of experiment under the joint direction of engineers of the Fox Case Corporation and General Theaters Equipment, Inc.

The subjects shown were "Fox Movietone Follies of 1929" newsreel scenes, with shots of Niagara Falls, a ball game taking in the entire diamond, the landing of the Leviathan, West Point cadets on parade and other views.

An illusion of depth is created, the long-sought stereoscopic effect. Figures on abroad panorama are shown in detail. The process is not merely a magnification of small film. The pictures are made in specially constructed cameras on film 70 millimetres wide, twice as wide as ordinary film. New lenses are used and a new type of projection machine.

Husband Charges Wife Deserted Him

Samuel W. Budlong, 41, of 1111 Sherman avenue, North Side, testified that his wife, Gladys M. Budlong, 39, now a food demonstrator in New York, deserted their Caldwell, N. J., home without cause and took their two sons, aged 9 and 11, at the hearing of his divorce suit before Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Common Pleas Court. They were married in Pittsburgh in June, 1915.

1,316 FOUR-BASERS IN BIG LEAGUES

THE probability that a new National League individual record for home runs will be established this year was strengthened yesterday, when the present mark of 42, first hung up by Rogers Hornsby while with the Cardinals in 1922, was equaled for the second time this week, Chuck Klein, of the Phillies, tied it by cracking out his forty-second homer of the season against Pitcher Leverett in the first inning of the game with the Braves. Last Tuesday, Melvin Ott of the Giants, paralleled Hornsby's achievement of seven years ago.

Chuck Klein

So there are now two chances that a new record will be chronicled before the season ends one week from tomorrow. It is reasonably probable that either Klein or Ott will make at least one more four baser before that time.

A new mark for the Heydler circuit in another sense was established when Klein pulled up even with Ott yesterday, as this is the first time that two players have made as many as 42 homers in a single National League season.

BUT records of this kind are little more than jokes in view of present-day conditions. Small parks and the lively ball have made home-run hitting farcical. With the rabbit rocket and the short fences to favor them, hitters like Honus Wagner, Ed Delehanty, Napoleon Lajoie, Frank Schulte and other stars of the old days would be so far ahead of the present champions as to leave no room for comparison.

Aside from the high individual totals, the general production of home runs in the two major leagues continues to demonstrate how little modern four-basers mean. With the season not yet over, no fewer than 1,316 homers have been made in the big loops up to today, 734 in the national, and 582 in the American. This total is 149 above the old record, which the two leagues set at 1,167 in 1925.

EDDIE QUIGLEY, an exceptional youth in many ways, learned the rudiments of baseball within a stone's throw of Forbes field, but after his first real opportunity to show his skill, he appears to be headed for a major league berth that will take him not only away from the Oakland Orchard but clear beyond the confines of the National League.

The youngster has been purchased by the Detroit Tigers and probably will be farmed out for more seasoning next spring. Eddie, who has reached his twentieth birthday, has just returned from a successful season in the Eastern Carolina League, a Class D organization.

Eddie Quigley

THAT'S the lowest grade of organized baseball, but the various scouts always like to penetrate these dust and cinder circuits, and it's well they do, when one considers that fellows like Rogers Hornsby made the grade from Class D to the majors in one step. Pitching for Kinston (N. C.) club, Eddie compiled a good earned-run average, but his team finished last and he dropped many battles by one run. However, he was followed for a week or more by Dick Crozier, one of Frank Navin's best sleuths, and Crozier saw enough promise in the Oakland youngster to negotiate for his services. He was able to close the deal and Quigley has been ordered to get ready for next season.

WELL over the 6-foot mark as he nears manhood, Eddie has an ideal build for a pitcher. He is fashioned along the lines of Ervin Brame, but probably will fill out in the next year. He won his neighborhood spurs by pitching stellar ball for the Jimmy Smith team. A friend recommended him to the Southeastern League, but Eddie did not get much chance in that farther-South circuit. Eventually he landed in the Carolina belt and then struck his stride.

Quigley is said to possess, among other things, a remarkable fadeaway ball. He has many things in his favor. His habits are ideal and he loves the sport. He attended St. Paul's Parochial grade school and then graduated from Schenley High. He resides with his mother and brothers and sisters at 3224 Dawson street, Oakland.

A FIRST-CLASS boxing referee must have more than the ability to keep close tabs on the work of the contestants from round to round, to terminate clinches, to count as high as 10 and to enforce the Marquis of Queensberry rules and any special commission regulations that may have been adopted.

A prime requisite is right judgment as to the condition of a fighter who has been dazed by a knockdown or a series of damaging blows, ability to determine whether he can rally sufficiently to avert a knockout and continue the bout, or must be saved from possible serious injury by the immediate stopping of the contest.

Louis Magnolia

IN THAT respect Louis Magnolia, of New York, who was the third man in the ring when Jack Sharkey and Tommy Loughran met there Thursday night, has more than once shown himself to be one of the best referees in the country. The most convincing evidence was given when he stepped between the battlers Thursday and stopped the fight while Loughran was standing in a neutral corner in a dazed condition. After sober second thought, even those few spectators who were at first inclined to criticize Magnolia for what they considered too hasty action now admit that the official did the right thing. For though Loughran had risen at the count of three his brain was befuddled and he clearly was in no condition to defend himself

IT WOULD have been criminal to let Sharkey hit Loughran again in view of the circumstances. With his opponent helpless, Sharkey was in a position to "load up" a punch and land it on Tommy's jaw with all the power at his command. Had he been permitted to do so Loughran might have been seriously injured, perhaps fatally.

As it was, he was saved from anything more serious than a defeat and the first knockout of his ring life. Instead of being ruined as a fighter, he will be able to continue his career, with a good prospect of winning many a battle in the heavyweight class in which he ought to be a prominent figure for a long time to come.

WHILE the Pirates were bowing to the law of average and suffering their second successive defeat at the hands of the Cardinals

Ex-Major League Player Succumbs

ALTOONA, Sept. 28.—After a week's illness of pneumonia, John P. Gochnaur, former major league baseball player, died in the Altoona hospital yesterday morning. He was a product of the sand lots of Altoona and his career on the ball field covered 35 years as a player and umpire. He was born in Altoona, September 12, 1875.

He played shortstop with the Brooklyn National team during the season of 1899. In 1900 he signed with the Cleveland club. From Cleveland, he went to the Pacific Coast, playing in San Francisco and Los Angeles. Since then, as an umpire, he was employed by the Middle Atlantic League, the New York Pennsylvania League, the International League, the Central, Three I and Kitty circuits.

Tony Stops Mack; Bass Fouls Datto

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Tony Canzoneri, of New York, exploded the championship aspiration of Eddie Mack, of Denver, last night, by winning on a technical knockout in the eighth round. After the fight it was learned that Mack had sprained his right ankle in the first round. He gamely continued, although his seconds wanted him to quit. He limped badly all through the second round and was forced to favor his injured leg during the remainder of the fight.

Johnny Datto, Cleveland, won on a foul in the fourth round from Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, after a wild slugging affair. Datto was floored for a count of nine in the third round.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28.—If the second place Pirates don't perk up in their work they are liable to be third-place Pirates when they leave here tomorrow on their barnstorming trip. Twelve times in a row did the Buccos lay low the Redbirds before landing here on their present invasion, but the long string of successes will not hold much comfort to the Pittsburgh team unless they get busy in the present invasion, which so far has brought two triumphs to Bill McKechnie's fast-going club.

BUCS LACK PUNCH

Jewel Ens, popular local boy, brought a snappy club to St. Louis for five battles in four days, but so far the Freebooters have been unable to find their punch. They have scored only three tallies in 18 innings, losing yesterday's fight by a 4-to-2 score.

Manager Ens hopes for better results this afternoon. As the two teams prepare for the third fight of the set, the invaders are only two games ahead of the Giants. They were five games ahead of the Men of McGraw when they finished up with the Braves in Pittsburgh last Saturday night. While it is true they have only seven more games to play it would be quite easy for them to drop below the Giants who might spurt through their remaining eight fights.

Ens probably will send Remy Kremer or Burleigh Grimes to the mound today. The latter perhaps would be the better bet if his sore thumb has recovered, but it has been bothering him. Skipper Bill is expected to counter with Bill Sherdel or Jess Haines.

BRAME YIELDS EIGHT

Ervin Brame held the St. Louis swatters to eight safeties yesterday, but the Pirates could make only seven off Fred Frankhouse and Sylvester Johnson. Brame also connected for a timely triple. The weak offensive of the Pirates was stressed on more than one occasion with a runner on third and only one out. Bartell failed to drive over a tally in one of these instances and Hemsley failed in the same kind of a spot.

Brame was unfortunate in jumping of poorly, the Cardinals scoring three runs in the first inning and their fourth tally in the second. They bounced six of their hits in these frames, Brame allowing only two hits for the remaining rounds. The Buccos knocked Frankhouse out of the box in the eighth, Johnson replacing him.

Outfielder Jimmy Mosolf played his first full game as a Pirate and connected for two hits.

WEIGHT, ODDS BEAT TOMMY —DEFOREST

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Boxing fans still are wondering how to account for the sudden coming to life of Jack Sharkey in his bout with Tommy Loughran for the American heavyweight championship at the Yankee Stadium, New York, Thursday night, and the collapse of Loughran under a right-hand punch at the start of the third round, for the only knockout defeat of the latter's career of 10 years against the best of them in the ring.

Jimmy DeForest.

It is hard to reconcile the Sharkey who has made so many bad showings in the last two years with the "killer" who opposed the resigned light-heavyweight champion, and also to explain Loughran's failure to ward off the vicious thrusts of the Bostonian with his classy boxing.

Perhaps the best explanation is that given the writer by Jimmy DeForest, veteran trainer of ringmen and other athletes, shortly after the battle reached its surprising conclusion. Jimmy was encountered in the press section at the ringside while the reporters gathered there were finishing up their descriptions of the bout.

LEADING TRAINER

DeForest is recognized as one of the best conditioners of fighting flesh in the history of the sport and his views therefore are of more than passing interest. I asked him how he accounted for the amazing reversal of form on the part of the two outstanding contenders for Gene Tunney's vacated title. The man who trained Jack Dempsey for the bout with the giant Jess Willard in which the Manassa Mauler displayed his greatest fighting form to score seven knockdowns in the first round and win the title and who later piloted Luis Firpo close to the championship heights chewed reflectively on his ever-present cigar as he pondered the question and then remarked:

"Well, I think, in view of what has happened, that it is a simple

PIAI BEATEN BY BELMONT AT MOOSE

Although the bout lacked the usual knockdowns caused when two hard punchers mingle, Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, made his debut as a main bout contestant a notable one by punching out a decisive victory over Johnny Piai, of Greenville, Pa., in the 10-round feature at Moose Temple last night.

From opening round until the final bell, Belmont showered Piai with an assortment of punches that landed from every angle. The first stanza opened with Belmont rushing from his corner in a tigerish manner, sending a barrage of short rights and lefts to Piai's jaw and midsection. Piai weathered this bombardment, however and fought a careful fight to finish the round on his feet.

PIAI'S SPURT SHORT-LIVED

In the second round, Piai tried to even matters somewhat, but was repulsed with another choice selection of well directed blows. This spurt was the only attempt by Piai to batter the Mason entry into submission. In the next three rounds, Referee Al Grayber, warned Piai to do a little more work, but the result of Belmont's body punches began to take their toll.

From then until the ninth, Belmont contented himself with banging Piai about, wasting no energy unless he sensed an opening. In the ninth, Piai uncovered his chin long enough to invite Jimmy to massage it, and the consequence found Belmont again coming close to scoring a knockout.

Piai's iron-clad jaw stood up under the assault, and the fans were cheated out of a kayo. Piai weighed 150¾, and Belmont, 147½.

DUNN IS VICTOR

With only one fight under his belt in two years, Patsy Gallagher, of the South Side, was pitted against one of the best feather-weights in the state in Johnny Dunn, of New Kensington, in the six-round semi-final. Dunn carried off the honors in flying colors.

Gallagher never had a chance against the clever up-river lad, who has had the experience of fighting champions.

The third round nearly finished Gallagher, who appeared tired after Dunn floored him with a right to the chin. He regained his feet without taking a count, although he painly suffered from the blow.

Florida Howard, Negro middleweight, of New Kensington, was given a two-round foul victory over Frank Monroe, of Fair Haven, in the second bout. Commissioner Havey J. Boyle decided the issue after Referee Grayber sent the Negro to his corner to take a rest before resuming the fight. Grayber claimed Howard was not hurt enough to quit, but the commissioner ruled otherwise.

In the six-round curtain raiser, Paul Balint, of the North Side, received the verdict over Sammy Paris, of the Hill. Both fighters weighed 124¾.

Al Grayber did the refereeing, with Red Robinson and Frank Ferris as judges. Bill Shuster was the announcer.

It was announced from the ring that Ray Kiser, of Chicago, and California Joe Gans, of Gary, Ind., would make up the main bout next Friday.

Pitt, Tech Sign Five-Year Grid Pact

Pittsburgh football fans are assured an annual classic for at least five more years, for Pitt and Tech have signed for games in 1930, 31, 32, 33 and 34, it was announced today. The old contract for games between the Panthers and Tartans expires this fall.

PITT, TARTANS READY FOR INAUGURALS

BULLETIN.

John Karcis, Carnegie Tech's high-powered fullback, will not be in the lineup when the Tartans meet the Bethany Bisons at Wheeling this afternoon. Karcis recently suffered an injury to his left hand, and it has become infected. He was found to be running a high temperature this morning, and Coaches Waddell and Steffen decided to keep the big line plunger out of action today. Armentrout is to be at full and Eyth will replace Armentrout at halfback.

By JESS CARVER.

Intercollegiate football will rally its legions today for the honest-to-goodness opening of the 1929 campaign. A scattering of contests really launched the season a week ago, but today marks the inaugural of general fighting along all major fronts save the Big Three and the Big Ten.

Pitt and Carnegie Tech, boasting powerful elevens, will set out on their schedules opposed to tri-state Class B Conference elevens, the Tartans playing Bethany College at Wheeling, W. Va., and the Panthers prying off the lid at the Stadium by tackling Waynesburg's Yellow Jackets. Duquesne, a 14-0 victor over the Edinboro Teachers last week, continues an assault against the stronghold of teachers' college elevens, meeting the dangerous Slippery Rock team on the Bluff gridiron.

KARCIS LOST TO TECH

Despite the fact that Tech will be without the services of John Karcis, high-powered fullback, all three of the local institutions are favorites today. The Tartan linecracker recently suffered an injury to his left hand, and the wound now is infected. Karcis was found to be running a high temperature this morning and Coaches Waddell and Steffen decided to keep their backfield ace out of the inaugural fray. Armentrout is to take Karcis' place at fullback and Eyth will replace Armentrout at halfback.

The Dukes probably are in for a tougher session than either Pitt or Tech. Slippery Rock boasts a much stronger team than last year, when the Teachers made the Dukes go th limit to k out a 9-0 victory.

Both Bethany and Waynesburg are newcomers on the Pitt-Tech cards. The Jackets are replacing Thiel as an opening test and Bethany has taken the place of Westminster on Carnegie's schedule.

The entire tri-state contingent will get into the action today with the single exception of St. Francis. Two of the scheduled battles are of great importance, their outcomes certain to have a definite bearing on two championship races. Geneva, an annual bidder for both the Conference and non-Conference title, clashes with an old rival and formidable titular bet, Allegheny. This game, booked for Meadville, will bring out some fine football, for neither eleven will be able to lay back in any respect. Having seen both teams in training during the past week, the outcome of the game to me appears to be a toss-up. Geneva fears the running attack of a powerful Allegheny backfield, while Allegheny stands in respectful awe of the Covenanter aerial game, the elusive running of Knapik and of Joe Preece's line crashing.

West Virginia, in a vengeful mood, has formidable Davis-Elkins on its hands at Morgantown. The Senators defeated the Mountaineers 7-0 a year ago, and with an eleven equally as powerful as the '28 machine, figure to win again today.

Washington and Jefferson takes on Ohio Northern at Washington, Pa. The Presidents look to be much stronger then they were a year back. Bill Amos and Ray Ride have their men in the best of physical trim.

THIEL AT HILLY

Thiel is in Philadelphia for a game with Temple. A new coach will direct the Lutherans today. T. C. (Tink) Rowley having replaced Dr. Tommy Holleran at the Greenville school.

Adrian College, of Michigan, will afford Charley Berry the first chance to see his Grove City machine in action. The Grovers are opening a week earlier this fall.

St. Vincent's, defeated last Saturday by Waynesburg, takes on another tough one today in St. Bonaventure, meeting the Bonnies in Olean, N. Y. West Virginia Wesleyan has Concord State at Buckhannon for its second game. The Bobcats lost to West Virginia last week, 16 to 0.

Westminster shares with Thiel the task of representing this section in the East. The United Presbyterians, in far from good trim, crippled with injuries and with some new men in the first team lineup, will engage Fordham University in New York.

Penn State's Lions roar for the first time, with Niagara University the recipients of the roars. Hugo Bezdek has done a bit of shifting during the training season and today gets his first opportunity to see the result of his handiwork. Niagara, incidentally, is rated as a tough nut to crack—even by Penn State.

In the south, Vanderbilt-Mississippi, North Carolina-Wake Forest, Alabama-Mississippi College, Tennessee-Center, and Florida-Southern will all prove one-sided. Florida's parade of players in their game will be interesting to eastern fans as the Gators play Harvard later in the season. They have one of the strongest teams in the south. Most of their last year's team is back including Crabtree.

Dartmouth-Norwich, Navy-Dennison, Colgate-St. Lawrence, Brown-Springfield will be very onesided.

West Virginia-Davis Elkins at Morgantown should be hot. The latter upset West Virginia last year.

While in 99 per cent of the games the outcome is a foregone conclusion, all followers of the sport will have their appetites for the game whetted by seeing new players and new plays. Maybe old players and old plays would do just as well. The thud of the ball and the crash of the tackle is all that is required by most of us to get us feverish.

BETTER SEASON IN STORE FOR LATROBE TEAM

(This is the twelfth of an annual series of special articles, written by Jess Carver, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph football writer, dealing with the prospects of tri-state college and preparatory school football elevens. The article on Geneva, with photos of the Covenanters in action, will appear in Sunday's issue of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.)

LATROBE, Pa., Sept. 28.—It seems there were a couple of Irishmen, and that they had a football team, these Irishmen, who had learned their football at Notre Dame (where all good Irishmen learn theirs), set out to apply their knowledge here at St. Vincent's College, in the year of 1928. Inasmuch as big league football was foreign to St. Vincent's, these two Irishmen had a lot of trouble in 1928, but as they surveyed their prospects for their second year, they found the outlook to be of a fairly roseate hue.

Clem Crowe, former Notre Dame end, and Gene Edwards, halfback star of the Irish not so long back, respectively head coach and first assistant here at the school Dick Guy is seeking to put on the map, are counting on improving by many per cent their record of '29. In 1928, the Saints, with an inexperienced squad, using a new and exacting system, won six out of nine games, scored 169 points to 78 for their opponents and conducted themselves more like a real college football squad than any other St. Vincent squad ever had.

SAINTS IMPROVED

I do not mean to imply that the Saints looked like world beaters, for they still are in Class B, but they seem to be coming along, and despite a defeat in the first game of their '29 schedule, I think Crowe and Edwards will have cause to be proud of their handiwork before the present campaign is over.

St. Vincent's losses from the 1928 team were not staggering. Capt. O'Donnel, a good center, graduated, as did Mangin, a halfback, Patalis, fullback and Campbell, a strong tackle. It will take a game or two for the men who have been named to replace these graduates to become acclimated, but the general heft, experience and class of the squad looks to be much better than last year.

THE ENDS

The Saint line, from end to end, is not going to be overly husky, averaging a bit under 175 pounds. The ends, Suspanski and Griseg, both playing their second year of varsity ball, are expected to be fairly strong. Test, Leyngel and Heinz Best, a Beaver (Pa.) candidate of unusual promise, will understudy the first-named pair. All three are freshmen.

Suspanski tips the beam at 177; Griseg weighs 155; Test goes 170; Leyngel 165 and Best about 170.

THE TACKLES

Another pair of sophomores, Zappone, 185, and Dunlap, 172, are slated to play the tackles. Both played enough last year to win letters, Zappone being paired off with Campbell, regular tackle, who has graduated.

Birk, who weighs 210 pounds, will bring the weight average of the squad up a bit when he is in there. Martine, going 185, will hold it about even. Both are freshmen.

THE GUARDS

Again at the guards, Crowe and Edwards have sophomores. Yankovitch, 175 pounder, and Pipic, who weighs only 160, but is an aggressive, agile sort of a player, have won first call at the center-of-the-line spots.

Malleg, weighing about 170, and Labuda, a 165 pounder, are the freshmen newcomers hoping to win letters as guards, and good enough to keep Yankovitch and Pipic on their respective tootsies all the way.

THE CENTERS

Ray Berk, though only a freshman, looks to be a fine substitute for O'Donnell's vacated place. He is a fine defensive man, being a sure tackler and adept at diagnosing opponent plays. Berk weighs 180 pounds. Friel, 172, and Hollis, 165, also freshmen, are fighting it out with Berk for the position.

THE BACKFIELD

Led by Capt. Rob Dailey, who makes a sturdy heart and a speedy set of legs do for a lack of weight, the St. Vincent backfield will average only 163 pounds, but possesses almost every qualification that a Class B backfield should boast.

Ross, a little 145-pounder, is at quarterback, and does the kicking. He is playing his second year of college ball. Capt. Dailey shares the halfback work with Westfall, and goes a great deal of the passing. Westfall, with his 175 pounds, has shown indications of developing into a consistently good ground gainer.

Kirchner, a freshman, seems to have won out as the regular fullback. He is the heaviest man of the four, tipping the scales at 185. Kacer, another fullback hope, is five pounds lighter.

Evancho, 160, Jessico, 155, and Mike Dailey, a scant 135, are the other halfback prospects. The little fellow, Dailey, is about as fast a man as there is on the squad, but because of his lack of size, seems to stand small chance of breaking into the action.

St. Vincent's opened the season a week ago, losing to Waynesburg as the Jackets put on a last quarter attack that wore down the stubbornly fighting Catholics. Today, they play St. Bonaventure in Olean, N. Y.

Next week, the Edinboro Teachers will be played at Latrobe. A trip to Emmetsburg, Md., will toss the Saints into action against Mt. St. Marys on the following week. Canisus is to be played at Buffalo on October 19; Salem at Latrobe, October 26; St. Thomas at Scranton, November 2; St. Francis at Latrobe, November 11, and Indiana at Latrobe, November 16. The season will be closed with the game with Allegheny, November 23.

Clem Crowe, former Notre Dame end star, is head coach, and is being assisted by Gene Edwards, a formed Rockne backfield star. Dick Guy is in charge of athletics as director-in-chief. Eddie Boyle is student manager.

The Saints will wear green jerseys with gold rosin stripe, green socks and tan helmets.

Shady Side Blanks Catholic in Opener

Shady Side Academy's eleven got away to an auspicious start yesterday when it blanked Catholic High, 13 to 0. Quarterback Ralph Harpster, brother of Coach Howard Harpster, former Carnegie Tech star, was one of the outstanding performers for the victors. He completed six out of eight forward passes and scored one of the two touchdowns. Reuter who scored the other, starred in executing the end-around play. The lineup:

THREE SANDLOT GAMES TODAY

TODAY'S GAMES.
Greensburg Hill Tops at McChesneytown.
Blaw-Nox at Etna.
Tarentum Firemen at Glassport Odds.

Fans following the fortunes of the independent gridiron will have only three games this afternoon to become interested in. At Glassport, Roy Quinn will show his Odds against the newly named Tarentum Firemen; McChesneytown will meet the Greensburg Hill Tops and the Etna Scholastics will stage a local affair with Blaw-Nox providing the opposition.

Folks around Latrobe naturally will take advantage of the opportunity to see Kennedy's Big Red machine in action a second time. The Hill Toppers looked good against McKeesport Olympics last Sunday, but the heavy line of the home club told on the much lighter Greensburgers. Manager McNerny had a well-coached club and the team, with a squad of 30 men, is going to be popular around the district. Kennedy will whip it into shape in this battle, for it is possible McChesneytown will be headed toward Pittsburgh a week from tomorrow.

Fans will watch with interest the Tarentum and Glassport clubs. Manager Weber, of Tarentum, has worked hard getting a great well-balanced ball club and expects to win against the Odds. Manager Roy Quinn says the Odds will be the best club since its inception. He will have a number of the former Clarion Indians in the lineup, and expects to have a big season.

Blaw-Nox and Etna are matched and this tilt gives the impression of being a local derby. Blaw-Nox had a good club last season, but is strictly a road club.

REAL OPENING OF GRID RACE TODAY

By CAPT. BIFF JONES,
Head Coach, United States Military Academy.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The football season can be considered as officially opening today, when the great majority of the college teams will swing into action.

Few, if any of the big teams, are playing hard games. As has been often pointed out, there are no longer many certified set-ups. Every season, since the introduction of the forward and lateral pass, some supposed underdog has reached right up and knocked the favorite for a goal or more. Practically every big team tries to work into its schedule several easy games as breathers to give the players time to mend injuries and build up their reserve of energy. The little teams often refuse to stay in their place. They point and especially prepare for the big fellows. They are willing to shoot the works and take the long chance. They have everything to win and nothing to lose. This situation is always a nightmare to the coach of a major team.

Biff Jones.

The new fumble rule, while not aimed against the small teams, will nevertheless take away some of their chances. The new rule prevents a member of the defensive team running with a recovered fumble. The ball is dead at point of recovery, so the alert defensive player by getting the ball has presented his teammates with 30 precious yards, but can no longer make a run which in previous years was often the margin of victory.

N. Y. TEAM AT HOME

In New York City, Manhattan, Fordham, C. C. N. Y., Columbia and N. Y. U. all play home games. Columbia and N. Y. U. will get fair opposition from Middlebury and Vermont. Spectators will get the opportunity of seeing all the substitutes before the close of these games.

One of the best games of the day, as far as competition is concerned, will occur at South Bethlehem when Johns Hopkins meets Lehigh.

Cornell and Penn open respectively against Clarkson and Franklin and Marshall. A score in the forties will be about right.

In the Western Conference Michigan and Indiana faces doubleheaders. This arrangement gives the coach a great opportunity to size up all his candidates in real action. The opposition is weak here, except that Wabash, one of Indiana's opponents, is usually able to give anyone an interesting afternoon. Eastern fans remember that two years ago they upset a good Colgate team.

Wisconsin should beat South Dakota by 20 or more points, while Carroll will be on the short end of a very large score against Iowa.

COAST GIANTS UNDER WAY

On the Pacific Coast, Southern California, California, Stanford and Oregon, the four favorites of the league out there, all get under way. Great things are expected of Oregon this year, which has been on the up grade for the past four years. Kitzmiller is a great back of whom much will be heard this year. Stanford will be up to its usual high standard with capable replacements for its losses. Much depends on whether Heineke, the capable center, is sufficiently recovered from his sickness to be able to play. The Olympic Club has a good chance of beating Stanford as they did last year.

Army opens at West Point against Boston University, as they have done the past two years. Under the tutelage of Reggie Brown and Ed Robinson the Terriers have shown consistent improvement.

WASH. COUNTY SCHOOLS OPEN

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 28.—Most of the high school grid teams in Washington County and nearby territory opened their football seasons yesterday. Washington High rode roughshod over Brownsville, 58 to 0, here, in a tilt that showed Coach Hank Day's eleven to be in midseason form. West Bethlehem and Bentleyville battled to a scoreless tie at Marianna.

McDonald High showed promise of having at least attained a Class B championship eleven when it whipped Midway, 59 to 0, at McDonald.

Peter's Township high bowed before Coach Vic Pearson's East Washington eleven, 31 to 6, on the local lot. Fullback Martin turning in four touchdowns.

East Bethlehem and Ellsworth had a merry go of it, winding up with a 14-all deadlock at Fredericktown.

Ventresca's field goal in the fourth quarter enabled Cecil High to nose out Claysville, 3 to 0, at Claysville.

Long's Sport Comment

after beating them 12 consecutive times, Frank O'Doul yesterday came close to sewing up the National League batting championship for the season.

The Philly slugger tore off three hits in the same number of times at bat while his rival for the league swatting title, Babe Herman, of the Robins, was idle. As a result of his big day, O'Doul now has the comfortable lead of 10 points over his opponent, his average up to today being .394 against Herman's mark of .384.

Toby Uansa

ANOTHER local football star is to start out in quest of big league baseball fame as soon as his college days are over. He is Octavius (Toby) Uansa, crack left halfback of the University of Pittsburgh eleven. In the opening game of the gridiron season against Waynesburg College at The Stadium today, Uansa begins his third and final year as a varsity athlete at Pitt. He will be graduated next June, and will then try to make his mark as a professional baseball player. Uansa is not only one of the best football backs developed in the college ranks around here in a long time, but he has also shown such exceptional promise as a baseball player that he has attracted the attention of a number of major league scouts.

TOBY, of course, will not consider the signing of a professional contract until he has completed his college days, but arrangements have been made whereby at that time he will join the New York Giants for a tryout.

Uansa was a catcher originally, but was converted into an outfielder, and has proved not only one of the fastest fielders in amateur circles hereabouts but also one of the leading sluggers. The McKees Rocks boy played for the Stowe Civics this year and in 32 games he made 16 home runs. He is a right-hand hitter.

PEABODY ACE COPS HARVARD CUP PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Jack Redmond, southpaw flash of Peabody High School, scored a straight-set victory over Maurice Saperstein, Bridgeville ace, yesterday afternoon to capture the final match of the seventh annual Harvard Cup net tournament for the inter-scholastic singles championship of Western Pennsylvania. The contest was staged before a large audience on the University Club gallery court and, though rain first held up the start of the fray for half an hour and later interrupted it for 15 minutes with the tally 2-2 in the third frame, the competition was keen and Redmond was compelled to work aplenty ere carrying off his 6-1, 6-3, 8-6 decision.

Redmond's triumph landed possession of the Crimson trophy for Peabody High for the next 12 months and continued the rather remarkable record that, since 1922, when the flagon was first placed up, no school has been able to annex more than one leg of the three required for permanent ownership. Billy O'Loughlin youngest of the noted local racquet clan of that surname, bagged the bowl in 1926, and again in 1928, but his initial win went to the credit of Shady Side Academy, while his second success placed the silverware in the hands of Duke Prep, which now relinquishes it to the East End institution.

SAPERSTEIN NERVOUS

Saperstein opened nervously against the Peabody entrant, whose forkhand slants and aggressive barrier play were well calculated to inspire over-caution in a lad already keyed up for titular tilting. Redmond annexed service to grab game one and it was 5-0 before Saperstein could pull together to sustain delivery after two deuces and crash the counting column. Redmond, however, returned to take game seven at 40-30 for the set.

Redmond cracked Saperstein's service to open stanza two, but the Bridgeville boy ran through the next two games to lead 2-1. Three games then followed service for 3-3, whereupon Redmond attacked vigorously as his opponent faltered and the set went to Peabody.

Saperstein broke Redmond's delivery to seize a 2-1 margin in session three, but was unable to cling to the advantage and his rival forged to the fore at 5-3. Every thing seemed over at this puncture, but Saperstein, unleashing his most brilliant assault of the day, slashed across a series of splendid drives to snare two games with the loss of but a single point. With the register at 5-5, Redmond nosed out a six-deuce game, only to slide back to a 6-6 deadlock as Saperstein courageously fought through two deuces in game 12 The thirteenth was Redmond's at love on service and the tussle terminated a moment later when, after two deuces, the Peabody luminary smashed a scintillant overhead for the closing marker.

WINS ON OFFENSIVE

Redmond won out on his offensive. Saperstein, apparently appalled at the thought of performing in the final, alternately underplayed his shots and overplayed them. Where coolness and accuracy might have crushed Redmond's forecourt assault, the Bridgeville youth was hitting past the lines or tossing up lobs that either fell short for easy kills or dropped beyond the rear boundaries. Redmond's overhead was excellent and his volleying, sharply angled and low-bounding. From the baselines, both contestants were inclined to wax cautious and hit for the center instead of the corners, but at the net the situation was all Redmond's. Service was of no distinct advantage to either aspirant.

BIG SOCCER CARD TODAY

TODAY'S GAMES

Union Switch and Signal at Crafton.
Pierpont Motors at Pittsburgh Celtics.
Rovers at Clan Douglas.
Lewis A. C. at McKeesport National Tube.

By TOM BIRKS

With the inclusion of the Lewis A. C., of Blaw Knox, and the McKeesport National Tube to the ranks of the District Soccer League clubs, four games will be staged in the loop this afternoon for the followers of the kicking code.

Jack Thomas and his Union Switch and Signal nine will make an effort to break into the win column this afternoon at Crafton where the newly-formed Heights club will operate at home for the first time.

Thomas announces that the form of Tommy Hennigan has gone through, and that the famous center forward will pilot the line in this game. The Switch has had a great club, but center-forward has been weak. Hennigan can get goals, and if the other forwards feed him around the goal mouth, Crafton will have to watch.

Blakeley's club looked good against the Rovers and the fans around that district should take a peek at two good soccer teams.

Pierpont Motors will try to even up for its defeat sustained last Saturday by stopping the Green and White—clad Celtics. This is also going to be a tough job, but the boys might get away with it.

At the Homewood playgrounds, the Clan Douglas eleven, probably feeling peppy after its great win last Saturday, will clash with the Rovers, and the sensational comeback by the Lawrenceville tribe indicates they are going to be tough to beat.

The new clubs will clash at McKeesport, the Tubers meeting Lewis. While the writer knows little of the Blaw Knox outfit, McKeesport is sure to be strong.

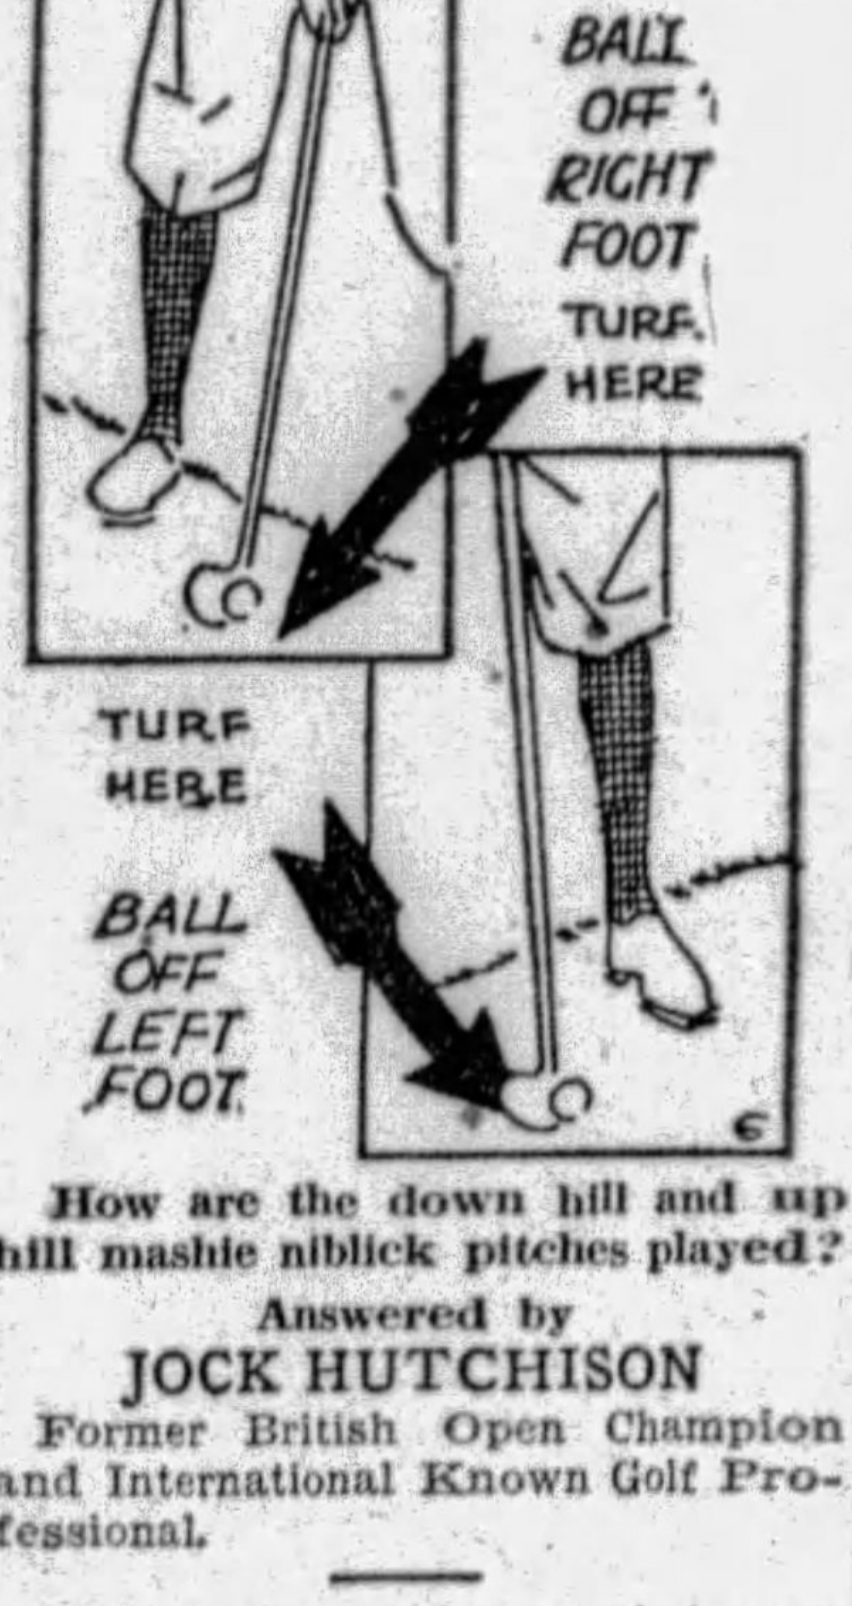
GOLF AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT



How are the down hill and up hill mashie niblick pitches played?

Answered by

JOCK HUTCHISON

Former British Open Champion and International Known Golf Professional.

Take a square stance when you play either the down hill or up hill mashie niblick shot. With the down hill shot, play it decidedly off the right foot. Hit with a downward stroke. Hit the ball first and the turf afterward.

Play the uphill lie shot off the left heel and hit the ball on the upward swing.

These are exceptionally pretty and gratifying shots when properly played.

matter to explain the work of the men. Sharkey won for two reasons. The greater of these was that he was the underdog in the betting and his fighting fury was aroused. The odds ranged from 7 to 5 to 2 to 1 against him. Had they been reversed, it is a good bet that he would have gone in there and fiddled around and put up one of his bad fights But, as matters stood, he was out to show the world that it had erred in rating his chances. He's the contrary type that WOULD do such a thing. He always comes through when least is expected of him, and when it is considered that he has something soft, as in the cases of his bouts with Risko, who defeated him, Heeney, who boxed a draw with him; Arthur DeKuh, who went 10 rounds with him, and Stribling, who made a close fight with him he doesn't get steamed up. Tonight, he was generally figured to be on the outside looking in, and he was all viciousness.

The other factor in his favor tonight was that he found out early in the first round that Loughran couldn't hurt him with his jabbing and that he had nothing to fear, so he tore in with the full weight of his body behind his punches and took all sorts of liberties. He wouldn't do that against any opponent who could make him respect his punch.

LOUGHRAN TOO HEAVY

"As for Loughran, he lost much of his speed afoot packing around 186½ pounds instead of coming in at around 175 pounds, as he did when he was defending his light-heavyweight title. Granting that he found the task of making 175 pounds difficult, he should have trained down to a fine edge rather than try to put on weight to meet the heavier man. Those extra 10½ pounds tonight were just so much excess baggage I have trained enough fighters to know that it would take his system at least a year to absorb so much new poundage and turn it into muscle and sinew, real fighting flesh. Tonight it was fat. Did you notice the puffiness around his chest and waist? There was the tipoff that he would have been much better off without much of those extra 11½ pounds.

"The weights of the men were: Sharkey, 196 pounds; Loughran, 186½. That shows a difference of 9½ pounds in Sharkey's favor, but it really was greater. Add Tommy's superfluous 11½ pounds and you find that Sharkey really carried an edge of 21 pounds."

All of which, coming from the Silver Fox, listens like sound reasoning.

The card of 10 three-round bouts will be completed today for the big amateur boxing show to be held in Motor Square Garden next Monday night for the benefit of Matt Cooney and his family. It shapes up already as the best simon-pure bill of the season and should draw a bumper crowd.

Maxie Rosenbloom and Tiger Payne battle each other again in New York tonight.

NOVAK INJURES ARM

Joey Novak, former local southpaw lightweight, who now makes his home in Erie, is on the sidelines with a torn ligament in one of his arms and probably will not be able to box again for a month.

The McKeesport Club drew its banner indoor crowd of the season with the Joe Trippe-Tiger Joe Randall bout Thursday night. The gate receipts were $1,416.

Tommy Daoey boxes Dandy Allen and Billy Fisk meets Edgie Ryan in bouts at Braddock, Pa., next Wednesday night.

Harold Scarney, Youngstown heavyweight hope, and Ray Fay, of Charleroi, are down for the 10-round windup at Butler next Tuesday night.

A new announcer will make his debut at the reopening show in Motor Square Garden next Monday night. He is J. G. Slumbo, of Braddock, an employe of the Westinghouse plant in East Pittsburgh. He is the young man who has been mimicking the regular announcer at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock all summmer and is said to be a natural master of ceremonies.

GARDEN FILLS CARD

The card has been virtually completed for the Garden show, which will be headlined by Benny Bass and Augie Pisano, junior-lightweights, the former of Panama and the latter of New York. George (K. O.) Blackburn, of Louisville, will take the place of Frank Florian, of Cleveland, against George Panka, the Homestead heavyweight, in the six-round semi-final; U. S. Carpentier, New Kensington featherweight, meets Young Corsey, of Canton, in the second six-round bout; George Chambers, of the North Side, will be one of the principals in the first six-rounder and Ray Ford, of Mifflin, and Red Hartley, of the North Side, box the four-round opener.

OLIVER, SOUTH HILLS WIN OPENERS

Oliver and South Hills High schools were victors in the opening grid battles of the City Senior League yesterday. Both whitewashed their opponents, Langley losing to the Oliver eleven, 18 to 0, and Perry bowing to South Hills, 21 to 0.

Big Angel Rapp helped Oliver rally late in the game to defeat Langley, while the Tunnelites found Perry an easy foe, scoring in every quarter.

In non-league battles, Schenley High showed a formidable team in blanking Dormont, 32 to 0, with Douglas tallying three touchdowns; Carrick whipped Sacred Heart, 44 to 0; Sewickley bowed before Crafton, 19 to 7, and Etna nosed out North Braddock, 6 to 0, the winner registering its points early in the contest.

Other games saw Coraopolis High set down Stowe, 8 to 0; Mt. Lebanon, a newcomer in interscholastic circles, score a safety to surprise Bridgeville, 2-0; Oakdale trip South Fayette Township, 6 to 0, and Freeport wallop Dayton, 26 to 0. Arnold decisively trimmed Leechburg, 18 to 0, and Bellefonte whipped Point Marian, 31 to 0.

New Kensington tripped Avonmore, 40 to 0, and New Castle drubbed Rayen High, of Youngstown, 19-0, in a night game. The lineups:

BOYS AND GIRLS GRID 'GUESTS'

The shrill cheers of thousands of boys and girls of the Boy Scout Gridiron Club, will add to the general noise and excitement which will accompany the opening of the collegiate football season, at the stadium this afternoon, when Pitt and Waynesburg meet.

The special 25 cent tickets, which include admission to the game and street car transporation both ways, went on sale throughout the Pittsburgh district yesterday.

The Coraopolis Y. M. C. A., yesterday requested that it be added to the list of distribution points already announced for the children's tickets. The stores and car houses of the Pittsburgh Railways Company which are selling the tickets all over the Pittsburgh district reported a big demand from the youngsters.

Although Allegheny County Council, Boy Scouts of America, is sponsoring the Boy Scout Gridiron Club, with the co-operation of the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Institute of Technology, and the Pittsburgh Railways Company, use of the low priced admission and transportation privileges is not restricted to Boy Scouts, but is available to every boy and girl 16 years and under in the Pittsburgh district.

Cubs Well Backed, But Not With Coin

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—With all the enthusiasm Cubs fans are showing for the Chicago team in the coming world series, they are expressing very little of it with cold cash.

That was disclosed today with the return of $200,000 sent here by Philadelphia Athletics fans in the East to bet against the Cubs at even money.

Attached to the wad of money was the message, "No takers."

Very little wagering is being done on the coming classic, it was revealed by Mundi and Stone, betting commissioners.

Marquette Handicap Race Feature Today

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—The Marquette Handicap, carrying an added money value of $10,000, attracted a field of seven crack route runners at Lincoln Fields today.

Rolled Stocking carries top weight of 114 pounds. A lightning fast track was in prospect.

CUB INFIELD SUPERIOR TO MACKS

(This is the third of a series of articles dealing with the relative strength of the Cubs and Athletics, coming world series contenders. Today's review deals with the infielders. The outfield will be considered in the next article.)

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

It is probable that one of the true things to say of the infields owned by the Cubs and Athletics is to point out that playing behind slab staffs of corresponding value they would have a very hard time basking in world series limelight.

In other words, the first defense line of either club is nothing to write home about. They were fortunate in being parts of clubs sporting fine pitchers. Right in our own league there are infield quertets superior to the McCarthy foursome and the same apparently holds good in the rival circuit as regards the A's first defense.

Lefty Grimm.

Jimmy Foxx.

MACKS WEAK

On paper, at least, the Mackian infield seems to be the weaker of the two. Jimmy Foxx, at first, apparently is a great hitter, but that doesn't make him a Grimm or a Terry at the gateway. Max Bishop perhaps is a fine secondbaseman, but there are no laurels on his hitting, at least this year, while Joe Boley at short is surpassed by a flock of boys. Jimmy Dykes, the versatile, lad, who has been performing at the hot corner seems to be the best of the lot, and on an infield like that of the Giants he probably would be a star. He is better than a .300 hitter.

The Cubs have one of the slickest firstbaseman in the sport in Charlie Grimm, when he is well. Many of us have felt this way about Lefty for seven or eight years, but it seemed to require his presence on a pnneant-winning team to strengthen the contention.

GRIMM GOOD AT FIRST

Grimm has wonderful hands for a firstsacker and his throwing arm is one of the best. Add to these essentials a rubbery physique which allows him to bound or fall while making catches and you have a remarkable fielder. Moreover, Charlie is a .300 hitter who drives the ball far.

All of this eulogy, howerev, might be lost in the coming games if Grimm's injured wrist handicaps him. Late reports from the National League front quote Charles as saying he will be O. K. Ror the benefit of the league, this is the general hope.

Rogers Hornsby.

Jimmy Dykes.

Hornsby is not classed as a high-class second-baseman, defensively, although he is fast and on some plays he shines. In the pivot of a double shoffle he is almost as good as the best. His weakness is on certain kinds of grounders and on ofts in the short outfield.

RAJAH IS STAR

But the Rajah is such a wonderful hitter he discounts his fielding shortcomings, and then some. He is the best hitter of the whole array of infielders included in series—some folks say he is the surest batter in the sport.

The kingpin swatter, besides batting around .370 this year, will score something like 150 runs and he will drive in almost as many. He has almost 40 homers to date. Let the A's ponder those feats.

Woodie English, at short, is still a kid. The hustling lad is batting around .280 and he has scored many more than a hundred tallies At times he is a bit erratic in his position, but he will be better than any shortop Mack can show.

CUBS LOOK BEST

The third-base rivalry appears to be in one way, although Dykes deserves the call on Norman McMillan.

It is hard to get a basis of comparison on the two infields, especialy on account of the interchangeable features introduced by Mack, who was moved to his decision, doubtless, on account of the ineffectiveness of one player or another

Yet taking the issue by and large, the Cubs appear to have an advantage on account of Hornsby and Grimm.

W. Va. Wesleyan Trims Concord, 39-0

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., Sept. 28.—West Virginia Wesleyan ran roughshod over the Concord College here yesterday, 39 to 0. The Bobcats tallied in every quarter except the third. Wesleyan's offensive started in the first 10 minutes of play when Rodriguez, Bachtel and Battles pummeled the Concord line repeatedly. Rodriguez scored first and a few minutes later Forrest Bachtel crossed the last marker.

Five Governors To See Series In Chicago

Programs for Antarctic Radio Feature Tonight

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

SPECIAL programs for Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins and other members of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition will be inaugurated over KDKA at 11 o'clock tonight in connection wits its regular message services to the Byrd Expedition in Little America and to the isolated dwellers of the Arctic and sub-Arctic regions.

A feature of these broadcasts will be a weekly digest of the world's news compiled especially for Sir Hubert by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and 28 newspapers of the Hearst Syndicate.

Sir Hubert, who sails today for Montevideo on the S. S. Northern Prince, takes with him two short-wave receivers specially designed to pick up KDKA. These receivers are very light, compact and simple to operate.

After arriving at his base at Deception Island off Graham Land, which he flew over last year and which proved to be a series of islands and not a peninsula of the Antarctic continent, Sir Hubert will make several preliminary flights and will then start on a flight which will be one of the longest and undoubtedly the most perilous ever undertaken.

Leaving his base he will head for Little America and the Byrd encampment 2,500 miles away and will follow the coast line, 2,000 miles of which has never been explored or seen by human eyes. He expects to arrive in Little America before Christmas and will then return by the first ship leaving the Ross Sea.

BUSINESS MEN AID TAX CUT CANVASS

Petitions to Congress to be Placed in Stores; Stage Folk Are Very Active

Pittsburgh merchants, restaurant proprietors, real estate dealers, tobacconists and others who come in daily contact with the public are uniting to assist in the campaign for the downward revision of the tax on earned incomes.

Petitions to be presented to Congress asking for a reduction of the tax levied on the incomes of professional people, salaried men and women and wage earners are to be placed on the counters of hundreds of stores and other business houses where the public will be invited to place their signatures.

CANVASS IS THOROUGH

While a canvass is being conducted by civic and commercial organizations and petitions will be circulated through residence districts, it will be made still more easy for the people to register their protests against the present system of taxing earned incomes. Those who do not have an opportunity to sign during the general canvass may find a petition next week in almost any office or drug store, cigar stand or restaurant.

Petitions in circulation among various organizations have been given a boost as a result of the activity of the Variety, the Amen Corner and the Pittsburgh Theater Managers' Association.

STAGE FOLK ACTIVE

John H. Harris, chairman of the amusement section committee in the campaign, reports that stage folks are giving 100 per cent support to the movement. The signatures turned in from this source are in addition to more than 1,000 signers who worked for Harris' committee last spring.

The canvass to be sponsored by Pittsburgh credit managers will be undertaken at a meeting of the leading credit men of the city in Gimbel's restaurant at noon Wednesday.

LANGLEY HIGH WINS TROPHY

An award of $75 and possession of the first silver cup was awarded Langley High School, winner in the clean-up, paint-up, plant-up campaign of last April, at exercises in the Chamber of Commerce last night. City and county, public and parochial schools took part in the campaign.

Brookline won $40 and gained second place on the elementary school cup, and Sewickley $60 and second place for the cup for county districts with elementary and high schools. Mt. Oliver, the only county district having elementary schools, won $40.

More Relatives Visit Ann Marie and Keep Her Away From Party

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

FOR a week Ann Marie had peace.

Every morning she got up and dressed herself before the girls were awake. She left $2 on the table for their food for the day and tiptoed out of the flat.

Every noon she ate a big lunch so that she would not mind missing a meal in the evening. Every afternoon she stayed behind in the office when the others left, and worked on Janet Goodwin's organdies until 9 or 10 o'clock.

The flat was always empty when she reached home, and she went straight to bed after her bath.

On Sunday Johnny Lawler and Brooke Walters drove up to town in Brooke's big car. They took Alice and Jeanie out for dinner and a long drive up the Hudson River, and Ann Marie had Neal all to herself.

At noon she par-broiled a porter house steak for him. She cooked creamed potatoes to go with it, and made a big bowl of crisp fresh vegetable salad and a pot of coffee.

"This is my idea of heaven-on-earth," she sighed happily when they were sitting at the little white-covered table with the sun shining into the room and the wind moving the curtains. "I love Alice and Jeanie, but I wish they'd elope with the boys today and never come back here!"

After lunch Neal settled himself on the davenport with the Sunday papers and soon was sound asleep.

Ann Marie washed the dishes and then began to collect his soiled clothing to get it ready for the Chinese laundry-man who always called for it on Monday.

In the pocket of one of his pajama suits was a folded piece of paper. A letter.

The minute she looked at it, Ann Marie knew that the handwriting on that piece of paper was a woman's writing . . . And then she did something that she was ashamed of forever after.

She unfolded the letter and began to read it!

"My dearest Neal:

"I am enclosing a check for the $200 that you say you need. Please do try to make it go a long way, won't you? I have had to have the house painted and the roof fixed, and I am not even going to buy a spring coat, although I do need one—"

Ann Marie read no more. She looked down at the bottom of the page at the signature: "Lovingly Yours,

"Mother."

Then she looked at the date at the top.

The letter had been written 10 days ago. "And Neal had that check when he was borrowing money from me!" she said to herself, "and when he was writing to Mrs. Lawler for money, too!"

He had told her, himself, a week before that he was without any money at all but that he had written to his aunt for some.

"When it comes I'll pay you back what I owe you, sweetheart," he had promised her. "My mother's monthly check will be here soon, too."

It had come—and he had never told her!

Ann Marie turned and looked at him where he lay sleeping like an innocent baby on the couch . . . Surely a man who looked like that could never be dishonest!

"He's just careless about money," Ann Marie decided, watching him as he slept. "He just hasn't any money-sense."

On Tuesday Ann Marie sent the painted organdies to Janet by parcel post.

On Thursday she had a check for $40 from Janet, along with a little note written on heavy, cream-colored paper.

"That organdy is so beautiful that I just hate the thought of having it cut up into dresses," she had written. "Two of my best friends saw it yesterday and they are going to ask for you to paint some for them, if you have time. You'll meet them Saturday. Be sure to get the 12 o'clock train. I'll meet you at the station up here."

On Friday Ann Marie made up her mind to buy a new hat for Janet's party. It would have to be black because her only really good dress was black satin. It would have to be straw because summer was close at hand. And it simply could not cost more than $5.

She found one Friday noon, during her lunch hour, in a small shop on Fourteenth street.

It was black and it was lined with blue that was just the deep sapphire-blue of Ann Marie's clear blue eyes. It was $8.

"I shouldn't buy it. I can't afford it," she said to Miss Hogan, who had had lunch with her at a nearby tearoom. They were getting to be very good friends, the two of them.

"Buy it, anyway," said Miss Hogan. "I'm going to give you a salary raise pretty soon. I promised Jim Goodwin I would as soon as you were worth it. You're worth it now. I didn't know how good your work was going to be when I hired you. Now, don't get the swelled head—" She laughed.

Ann Marie took the hat . . . She did want to look well at Janet's party the next day among all of Janet's friends. She could imagine what they would be like. Beautifully dressed, with fresh smooth skins and perfectly-manicured fingers and satiny hair.

Now, why hadn't Jim fallen in love with one of those girls instead of with her . . . with Ann Marie Macy who had nothing and was nobody? It was a mystery.

On Saturday morning at 10 o'clock Marie left the office.

"You needn't have come at all today," Miss Hogan told her in her blunt good-humored way. "I told you so."

"I know," and Ann Marie nodded, "but I wanted my salary check."

Miss Judkins, the cashier, gave it to her and she rushed out of the building.

"I'll have a whole hour to bathe and dress and do my nails," she thought on the way home. She wanted to arrive at the Goodwins' house looking as fresh as the other guests—and not like a dusty office-hack. She wanted to be a credit to Janet.

She stopped at the flower stand on the corner of her own street and bought two white camellias to wear on her old black dress.

"I shouldn't buy them." The little warning thought came again as it always did when she spent a cent foolishly. "I ought to put away every dollar for my painting lessons!"

She could hardly believe that she had made $70 that week! . . . Seventy! Twice as much as she had ever made in one week before! . . . "And all of it came to me through Jim Goodwin," she remembered, starting down the street toward Susquehanna Hall.

A very small and shiny green roadster stood before it. Two old-fashioned Gladstone bags were strapped upon the running-board.

They caught Ann Marie's eye as she opened the door of the apartment.

There was something familiar about those bags, somehow or other. Ann Marie knew that she had seen them both before—but she couldn't remember where.

She went on up the stairs.

As she came to the top she could hear a steady murmur of voices in her own apartment.

She opened the door.

Jeanie and Alice, still in their night-gowns and kimonos, were curled up on one of the beds, smoking cigarettes.

On the other one, side by side, sat Mr. Macy and his bride!

The second that Ann Marie saw them she knew all about those two Gladstone bags down in the street . . . They were Mrs. Leezy's bags, of course! They had stood on the floor of the trunk-room back home for years. But what were they doing, strapped to an automobile?

"You haven't bought a car—you two?" Ann Marie gasped, and she burst into a laugh.

It was her father's new wife who answered her.

"We certainly have," she said, getting up and kissing Ann Marie, "and what's more, we have taken our wedding trip in it! We're on our way back home now."

"I drive it," she added after a pause. "It's my car. I bought it from that smart salesman down in Mr. Brown's place on Front street. That one who's goin' around with Florence Lawler now, you know."

She sat down again and sniffed loudly.

"I'm goin to sell it, though," she went on presently. "It makes your father that jumpy to ride in it!—He thinks a woman shouldn't drive a car—but I say I can guide one around just as good as any man that ever wore pants!"

Then she gave Ann Marie a sharp, searching look.

"Want to buy it—cheap?" she asked.

"Heavens, no!—What would I do with a car?"

"Drive it around, of course!" replied Mrs. Leezy. Ann Marie knew that she would never be anything but "Mrs. Leezy" to her, no matter how long she lived with her father.

"I can't afford a car. You know that," she said. "Why don't you sell it to Howdy?"

"Because we don't want to give it away!" snapped Mrs. Leezy. "Howdy never pays for nothing. You know that as good as I do!"

Alice and Jeanie exchange sly smiling glances. Her bad grammar had always been a source of laughter with them.

"What are you two snickering about?" she asked them sharply, and then turned to Ann Marie.

"Well," she said, "ain't you going to ask us to lay off our coats and stay a while?—You may not like your father's marrying me any better than the rest of the children do, Ann Marie. But I expected you to be polite to us, at least!—You might give us the chance to refuse to eat dinner with you .... You might invite us for a meal as long as we're here!"

Ann Marie thought of Janet's party and of the 12 o'clock train that Janet was going to meet.... Her heart sank. It was 11 now.

"You know I want you to stay! —You take your things off this minute and let me make you both a cup of coffee. And in a little while we'll all go out and have lunch somewhere!"

Janet's party had gone glimmering, so far as she was concerned.

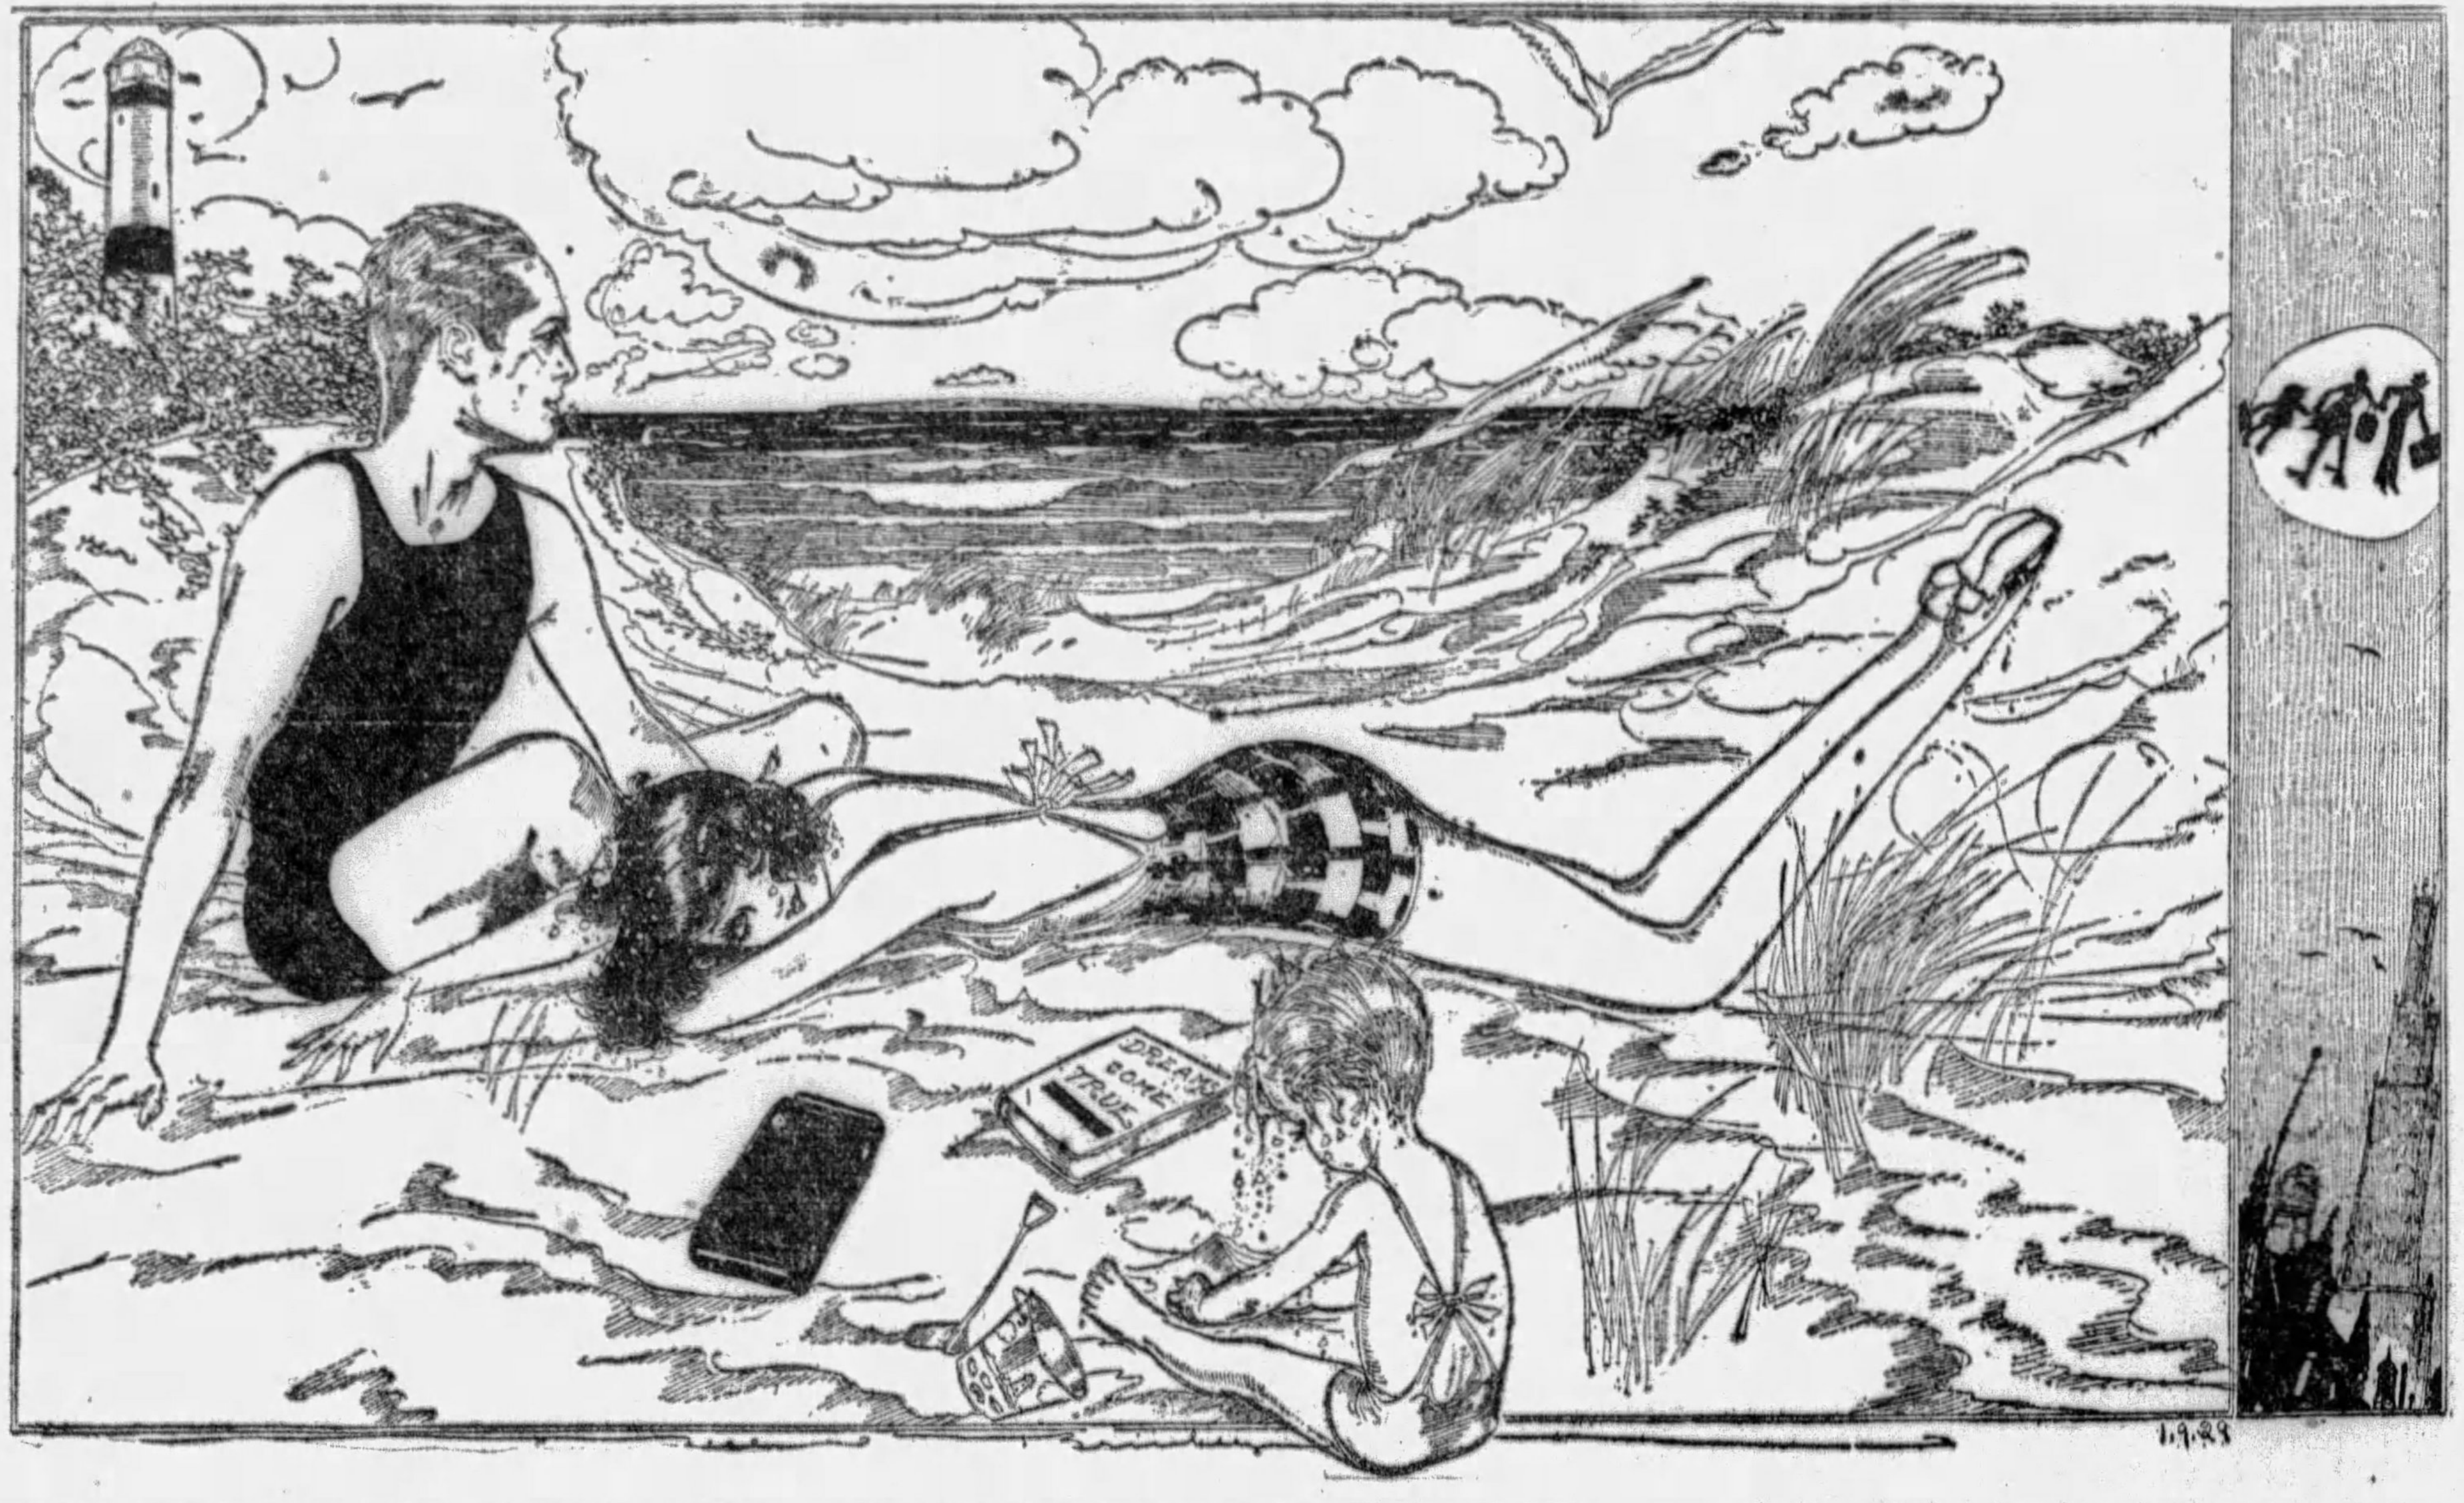
THE LAST DAY

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY



STEPPING down the "Avenue" in New York's delightful September twilight, than which there is no more romantic—unless it be the twilight in your own home-town, which is always the most beautiful of any, or twilight on a Western foothill, which I maintain is the most delicate heart-swelling of all!—I say, stepping down the "Avenue," or along a cross street in the air of purple wine pricked with sparks of street lights like bubbles, linked arm in arm with the arm you like to stroll with, looking in windows of "silver-stores," gown shops—lighted up like the interior of a neuvo riche town-car, pouring over household kitchen ware, shiny and new, artist material displays, and windows of hardware, electrical "phlyns" and tools—HE just loves them and you love them for his sake—doing all this, idling on the way to dinner and the theater, sometimes you both look up and contemplate with awe the night-sky over the city.

Sometimes there's a moon, riding high and splendidly silver, lonely, far above the graceful lift of a modern Babylonic building. You see something wing across it, black. Either a plane, a bird or a cloud. You think.

But it isn't. It's the last of the homeward fliers. The stragglers coming in, stubbornly, from the dear, delightful Elysian Fields of Vacation Days.

The other night I was sure I saw a Papa, a Mommy, and a small boy, sharp in silhoutte, go across the silver shield, their legs floating out, their suitcases flying, holding hands, coming in from the country to land somewhere in the big town. The arm I like to stroll with said it was only the shadows, the hills and valleys on the moon. Perhaps. But some day, not so many ages from now, we will all be coming in by air, on individual gliders, our own propellers whirring at our backs. And there will be six-year-old sizes, sport models for the youthfuls, and luxurious size forties for the gran'-parents.

Looking at the three across the moon, I remembered what a day that "last day of vacation" is. The period to an entry in your book of memories! A restless day, when you try to dream and be still, to flavor the last drop in your glass, to pick every tiny crumb of your cake that is almost gone!

A perfect day, no matter what it does. A man and a woman, who have loved, with the visible sign of that love making-believe in a scrap of a sun-suit in the sand beside them. Lonely together; far from a noisy world; idly happy. The two who are grown, and gratefully back again in the same state of dreamy irresponsibility of the infant bit of humanity that belongs to them. Two weeks of each year stolen with a clear conscience from "being an adult!"

Comes a selfish, fervent thought. THIS three have still their run-away days to come. Fourteen days instead of ONE last one!

How to Keep Well

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

Emotional Ravings Often Effect Health

THIS is written on a railroad train between Newark and Washington. We made a late start from the farm and for the last 10 minutes it was "nip and tuck" whether we could arrive in time to catch the train.

DR. COPELAND

It seemed very necessary to make this particular connection because of duties in Washington. I confess to having had a feeling of tenseness and undue anxiety over the matter. Usually a very calm person in the face of emergency, I found my heart beats increased 8 or 10 above normal.

Is it a good thing to have periods of emotional stress?

While we cannot avoid many such experiences in life, most of them are not worth while. In fact, they are unwise and, under certain conditions, unsafe as well.

On the way down this morning, I read of the death of a man I used to know. He was at a ball game Saturday, got excited, sat in the sun, and perhaps had indigestion. The combination was too much for a weak heart. He died the next day.

Emotion appears to have a more powerful effect upon the system than does rather violent exercise. What it does to us is not quite clear. Among other things it stimulates certain of the "ductless glands" to throw into the blood stream substances which excite the heart to more rapid action.

This may cause the muscles of the heart vessels to contract. Rapid heart and constricted vessels result in increased blood pressure.

This is a matter of no particular consequence, provided the blood vessel walls are firm and elastic. But if these walls are hardened or weak from degenerative conditions, there may be a break. Then, certainly, there is sure to be more or less trouble.

Emotion, anger particularly, is credited with creating in the body certain substances, sometimes called "toxins," which are poisonous in their action. Even though this theory may be somewhat visionary, any one of us can testify to the ill effects of anger. Have you not felt sick for hours after an outburst of anger?

It does not pay to give way to violent emotion. I wouldn't give much for a man or woman who is absolutely without emotion. Such persons are too cold to suit me. But after middle life violent expression of any emotion is physically dangerous.

Nature has provided that as we grow older we become more restrained. We are more temperate in our emotional expressions. That is a wise provision.

Good manners and good health demand that we indulge in no unseemly outbursts. Even though we say nothing, even though we do not swear at the chauffeur, it does not pay to get mad.

Answers to Health Queries

S. H. Q.—How can superfluous hair be removed? Is there any chance of scarring? 2. How can flat feet be overcome?

A.—When the electrical needle is properly used there is little scarring of the skin, but it must be employed by an expert. 2. This condition can be remedied by wearing the correct kind of supports.

MRS. T. W. L. Q.—How can I reduce my weight?

A.—Eat very sparingly of starches, sugars and fats. Get regular systematic exercise. A gradual reduction in the amount of food consumed, with the regular exercise will work wonders in most cases.

Love's Awakening

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Mysterious Doings Around Farmhouse Arouses Katie's Ire.

"ALWAYS the sure-fire first aid," Katherine said laughing, but with sincere commendation in her voice when I assured her that I was glad to prepare something to tempt the appetite of her royal patient.

"It's a privilege you're giving me," I retorted, feeling the impulse to nonsensical gayety which is so often the reaction after a strenuous emotional experience. "It isn't every woman who has a chance to prepare invalid dishes for an heir to a throne."

"Right you are," Katherine replied. "Perhaps when he comes into his kingdom he'll give you a decoration or something."

"Not unless I get this collation prepared pretty soon," I said. "But you haven't told me what you want yet."

"He hasn't any temperature, so he can have something with raw egg in it. Suppose you whip up one of those concoctions of grape fruit juice, raw egg, sugar and cracked ice for an appetizer and then rustle him a plate of toast and a pot of tea."

"I probably shall eat or drink the whole thing on the way up," I told her as I walked toward the door. "I gather from your request that your patient is not as ill as you feared he would be."

"No, indeed," she said. "I am much relieved. He was quite down and out when they brought him in this morning, and I didn't know what might develop, but he has a constitution of iron, apparently, and he's coming along splendidly. All that's troubling him now is worry over Mary. He doesn't trust me when I tell him that she's perfectly all right. Nothing will do him but a sight of her in person, and with her grandmother on the job, that's going to be a hard job to manage. I intend to turn that over to you also."

She made a little moue at me as she turned and ran back to Dicky's room, where the wounded Prince Georges was convalescing under her efficient care.

"You're what Harry calls a buck passer," I called after her softly, and then I hurried down to the kitchen to meet Katie just coming in from the barn, a basket of eggs in her hand. She set it down and, putting her arms akimbo, faced me with a "glittering eye" that any ancient mariner might have envied.

"I like to know vot going on outside dere," she said truculently. "Dot Jeem and dot Meester Undervood und Meester Graham, dey putting strings of barbed vire all around dose trees of orchard next to house und around barn und scheecken house. Und dey tell me be careful, not stoomble ofer it, und not step foot out of house after dark. But dey say nodings of vy. But dot Jeem knows. Me, I see it in hees cock eye. Now for vy he know tings round here, und me be put off in corner mit my face to vall und told to keep still like good leetle girl."

She took a fresh breath and began again.

"Me, I bin mit dees family longer dan dot Jeem. For vy he know tings more dan me, efen if he be my hoosband? You tell me dot vunce, und you tell me vy Meester Graham heem say to Meester Underwood ven he see me coming near heem: 'Dose pitchers empty und vide open, dees morning.' Vot he tink, I nefer hear dot shoke about leetle pitchers mit de beeg ears. I know vot he mean all right, all right, und you shoost vait. Maybe he tink I no can find oot eef I vant to. He needn't be so smart—"

I took a sudden resolution for I knew that Katie, trying to find out things, would be a dangerous proposition to the secrecy which the farmstead preparations required. I think resentment at Dicky had a little to do with my resolve also.

"Katie," I said, "I agree with you. You are entitled to know things just as much as Jim is. If I give you my word of honor that I will tell you all about this as soon as I get time, will you promise me to say nothing, and not try to find out anything until then?"

Her face lit up as if someone had suddenly turned a spotlight on her.

"Und I know eferyting dot Jeem does?" she queried, with such laughable jealousy of her husband that I had hard work to retain my gravity.

"Every bit as much," I promised. "And now get the tea things ready and bring me the fruit squeezer. Mrs. Bickett wants something fixed for Mr. Jackson to eat."

Tomato Juice Cocktail

As a first course at luncheon or at a supper, the tomato juice and the sauerkraut juice cocktails are welcome substitutes for the usual iced drinks.

Three cups strained tomato juice, 2 teaspoons sugar, 2 tablespoons ketchup, 1 small onion chopped, ¼ cup orange juice, dash of cayenne.

Marinate the onion in the tomato juice and chill for two or three hours. Mix all ingredients, strain, frappe and serve with crushed ice.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Prospective Mother-In-Law.

DEAR Mrs. Beeckman:

With a shower gift for a future daughter-in-law, what is the proper way for the enclosed card to read. "From your future mother-in-law;" "from Mrs. Brown", or "from Mother?"

I have received gifts for different occ sions and each time the card enclosed was signed in one of the above forms.

MISS E. G.

I SHOULD like to suggest even a fourth—("From Mother Brown." Do you like that form?) The words "in-law" are so cold that they do not look well or sound well on a card accompanying a gift. And "From Mrs. Brown" is altogether too distant and meaningless as far as any relationship goes. "From Mother" is delightful, if the bride has, at the invitation of the mother, the right to call her new mother by that affectionate name.

Regarding "Tipping."

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When stopping a car before a store entrance and so forth, where there is a doorman who opens your door for others to alight, is it necessary to tip? Also, if he takes your car and parks it, is it necessary to tip?

2. When staying at a hotel for several days, is it proper to tip the head waiter at the last meal?

3. If staying at an American plan hotel, do you tip the waitress at each meal?

4. When taking a bus or railroad conducted tour, not knowing the price of the meals, how do you do your tipping? Wouldn't it be proper to do it all at the end of the trip?

5. I have a friend who uses crutches to aid her in walking. She has to have someone help her up and down steps. When a doorman helps her or a porter or conductor on the train, what about tipping?

INTERESTED READER.

UNLESS the doorman does some special service for you, such as parking your car, it is not necessary for you to tip him.

2. Yes.

3. Usually, if you have the same waitress this is done at the end of your stay.

4. Yes, at the end of the trip. Often, usually in fact, the tipping in this kind of trip is done by the conductor. This is specified in the prospectus, or you can find out from the managers of the trip.

5. She would not fee the conductor, but she will if she wishes and can afford to, tip the doorman or porter. However, the world has such a fine heart, that an attendant in such a distressing case, would be only too happy to be of help, and with no expectation of fee.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

And, Then Came Freud!

THE styles change in column-writing, as in everything else. When bobbed sentiments and jazzy topics are in fashion, it's no use to go on being subtle and romantic. You are speaking a dead language.

HELEN ROWLAND

Love was the popular topic of the day, when I began writing this column, "How to Win a Woman's Love." "How to Charm a Man." "How to Get a Husband." How to flirt, how to vamp, how to play the game. All these were the intriguing and absorbing subjects, on which we rang the merry changes.

Then, suddenly, love and romance faded into the background, and MARRIAGE took the center of the stage. Marriage and divorce. That was a fertile field. There was always something new and interesting to say about matrimony.

"Modern Marriage—and How to Bear It." "How to Be Happy Though Married." "How to Cook Husbands." "The Trials of Trial Marriages." "Part-Time Marriage." "Companionate Marriage." "How to Divorce Your Husband Politely." "Why Change Your Husband?" Good old perennial topics, that never lost their kick!

And then came FREUD! And the Sex Problem! And the sexophone! And Sex-Appeal! That was all the post-war generation wanted to hear about, think about or read about. It was always sex o'clock with them!

Romance was an illusion, like Santa Claus. A joke, a bore, hokum! Romeo was a boob. Cyrano was a myth. Abelard and Paola and Lancelot and Lochinvar—all those one-woman men were time-wasters. Variety was the spice of love—and marriage was a mid-Victorian relic, like walnut furniture and enclosed plumbing.

* * *

It was the jazz-age! Caveman stuff—and cocktail kisses. Sheiks and Shebas and woman-tamers! Love 'Em—and Leave 'Em! How to Spring a Good "Line." The Gentle Art of "Necking." Denatured Love. Sex Psychology. Who's Whose in Matrimony? Rough-house Love-Making. Flat Tires. One-arm Driving. Collegiates and Half-baked Cynics.

(Excuse me, while I reach for the smelling salts.) Those were hard days for a column writer—even for one with a sense of humor. With love dying of under-nourishment, marriage cracking under your feet, and the two sexes jeering at each other, there was nothing to smile at. But, this, too, was destined to pass away.

And it has! We have come to a dead stop. "Sex Appeal" is the great national joke. The very word "sex" on a book-cover makes us yawn. The only thing a man wants to know about love, kisses or women, is how to dodge them. The marry-go-round has completed the circle and come back to the starting point. We are all "fed-up" on the sex problem.

What next? I wonder. With the return of long hair, long skirts, feminine sanity and drawing-room manners, with LOVE come back into fashion, again, like walnut furniture? And needle-point chairs?

* * *

But, then, did love ever really go OUT of fashion? Not with WOMEN! That was only their little bluff—and it didn't work! A good love story and a good love-column are still "best sellers."

Soak Cauliflower

Before cooking a cauliflower, soak it in unsalted water. This draws out the insects. If the water is salted the insects are killed, but remain in the vegetable.

Calico Pajamas

Calico, which has enjoyed such an important vogue in quilted coats and jackets this season, is being adopted for pajamas at many resorts.

Horoscopes

Sunday, September 29.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds promise for affairs of ecclesiastical nature, as also for all industry, labor and cultural pursuits. There should be much liveliness and many propitious circumstances, but be not hasty in change.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a fairly prosperous year, with substantial rewards and recognition for hard work, persistency and efficiency. There may be small annoyance in employment, but haste in change would be unwise.

A child born on this day may be very clever, resourceful and talented and may make substantial success through perseverance and steadfastness.

He who wears his morality but as his best garment were better naked.—Gibran.

Monday, September 30.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast stresses the importance of social, domestic or affectional activities in which there is likely to be much happiness and gratification. Friendship and love may engage attention, but there is an augury of some subtlety or scandal. Business may likewise assume surprising angles, but employment is well favored. Sign papers carefully.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves devoted to social, domestic or affectional interests, which should flourish and bring happiness. Business with secret societies or closed corporations may require subtle understandings or intrigue, but beware scandal.

A child born on this day may be gifted in many social arts and graces, leaning to high ideals and fine emotions, but there may be either a mystical tendency or a strain of the secretive and subtle.

Summer Memories

I CAN remember still how high waves fell
And spread their thunder on the open shore:
I can remember things I will not tell,
Kisses long buried in the ocean's roar.

I can remember how the full moon drew
A lane of magic on the silver sea
And shimmering loveliness, my dear, with you
And all the universe engulfing me.

I can remember kneeling as a slave
Before you, asking you your sweet reprieve—
I even can recall the pledge I gave—
And that's darn near a record, I believe!
—Wilfred Funk.

NONSENSE

IT is supposed to have happened in the Pennsylvania Station and an elderly Jewish man had just seen a friend off. As the train pulled out another dialectician raced up breathlessly, only to miss it, and he began to fume, fret and fuss in boisterous Yiddish. He even pulled his beard and his hair and while he wasn't exactly a lunatic, he would have served as one until a lunatic came along.

The other said: "So you missed your train?"

"Yass!" growled the other.

"By how much did you miss it?" persisted the inquisitive one.

"I missed it by just a minute," grunted the annoyed train-misser.

"So dun't get so haxcited," countered the first, "the way you're carrying on, is like you missed it by an hour!"

THE TEST

If I could live a whole week through
And never write a line to you;
If I could pass you on the street,
Pretending that we do not meet;
If I could turn my back and dare
you leave
And never let you know how much
I grieve;
I'd learn at last how much you care—
Indifference is the hand that lays all secrets bare!

A FORM OF CRITICISM

CLARENCE BOYKIN, of Richmond, Va., submits this for addition to the column's Crisp Cracks from Critical Cusses Dept. Several seasons ago the reviewer for the N. Y. World said of the unhappy chorus of a musical show, "You can see them sing and hear them dance."

BY WAY OF VARIETY

"Strictly Dishonorable," which thrilled the first audience at the Avon Theater the other evening, is the first smash success for Brock Pemberton, the producer, in nine years. Not since "Enter Madame" has he enjoyed superlative comment about any of his efforts, although he has had what might be termed moderate hits.

But what we started out to say was that Brock Pemberton is one of the very few producers who is a pal of almost every drama critic in New York. He dines at their homes frequently or at the Algonquin Hotel with those critics who dine there, yet these friends have not received his plays affectionately. In fact, their comments have been cruel.

It is jotted down here chiefly because it is excellent testimony to the honesty of most of the local drama defenders.

NO

"THERE was a Scotch theatergoer at 'Remote Control,' the new hit at the 48th St. Theater last night. He learned that most of the action takes place in the dark, so he brought a lot of picture negatives which he developed. Are you screaming?—Arthur Kober."

RETREAT

The dreamer rises to a plane
Wherein he rules his small domain—
His kingdom's that of sweet illusion,
From which is barred the world's confusion,
Until the spell that's woven breaks;
The king's dethroned when the dreamer wakes.

What matter that it's fleeting glory—
Life's pleasures are but transitory.
—Sylvia Feinberg.

NOT NEW, BUT CLEAN

AND Charles Ray tells of the sentimental woman who was married to an unromantic actor. They were in their hotel room and she suddenly queried: "Would you visit my grave often after I die, dear?"

"Certainly," he said with a little animation, "I pass it on the way to the golf links, anyhow."

NIFTY

In the October 5 issue of Collier's John B. Kennedy discusses the expression "Makin' Whoopee" and says: "They call books after it; they call shows after it; they call doctors after it."

HOW!

And George Jean Nathan, one of the better wise-crackers, says that a star is an actress ocassionally loved by her public, but more generally by her manager.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES
DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

TRY your hand at this fascinating game of Anagrambles—the game that is taking the town like the crossword puzzle craze took the whole nation for a ride through the dictionary.

The game is quite simple. Merely change the following words by the addition of the single letter indicated. Do not omit any letter of the original word. The letter may be inserted at the beginning of the word, anywhere within the word, or at the end. Thus, the word "pate," by the addition of the letter "l" becomes either "pleat" or "plate." The word "drag" may be changed to either "grade" or "raged" by the addition of the letter "e."

The original word must be changed in meaning by the commentary letter. To change "mine" by adding "d," to form "mined," would be incorrect. Rearrange the letters of your word to change its meaning, not its tense or number. Take a pencil now and write in your newly formed word in the spaces provided.

A Thrilling Story Of Gang Life

LITTLE CAESAR

By W. R. Burnett

Otero Is Shot as Rico And He Are Fleeing From Policeman

CHAPTER XXXII.

OTERO and Rico went down the fire escape. They stopped at the foot of the fire escape and Rico took Otero by the arm.

"Listen," he said, "here's the dope. We got to get to Ma Magdalena's. She's got most of my jack and a good hide-out. It ain't gonna be easy, because the bulls're probably scattered all around. But once we get there, we're O. K."

"All right," said Otero.

They started. Rico knew every alley in the district, and he led Otero by such a safe route that they were soon within a block and a half of Ma Magdalena's without having crossed a main thoroughfare.

"Now," said Rico, "we got to watch our step. If the bulls are cruising, they're cruising this street sure."

"All right," said Otero.

"Listen," said Rico, "don't be afraid to use your gat if the fun begins. They can only hang you once."

"I ain't afraid," said Otero.

They left the alley and were half way across the street when somebody shouted at them to halt. Without turning they broke into a run.

"It's only one bull," said Rico.

A bullet sang over them and they heard the blast of a policeman's whistle. Otero stopped in his tracks, turned, took a steady aim and fired. The policeman staggered forward three or four steps and fell to his knees.

"Got him," said Otero.

Rico turned. The policeman was kneeling in the middle of the street, trying to steady his hands for a shot.

"Duck," cried Rico, simultaneously with the firing of the policeman's gun.

Otero twisted sideways, looked at Rico with surprise, then dropped his gun, and began to walk up the alley holding his stomach. Rico put his arm around him and, pulling him over to the side of the alley where he could keep a telephone pole between them and the policeman, guided him along. But after a few steps, Otero pulled away from Rico and cried:

"Run, Rico, run. They got me sure. I can't feel nothing."

Rico grabbed him and tried to pull him along, but he resisted.

"Damn you, Rico," cried Otero, "run! I can't go no farther. I'm done for."

Rico heard the roar of a police car. He released Otero, who staggered away from him and then fell flat on his back.

"Run, Rico," said Otero.

Rico climbed a fence, ran up through a filthy back yard and in at an open back door. There was a young Italian girl sweeping in the hall. At Rico's sudden appearance, she dropped her broom and flattened herself against the wall. Rico took her by the arm.

"Listen, sister," he said, "the bulls're after me. I'm going out the front way, see, but if the bulls come through here you tell 'em I hopped the fence next door and doubled back. Got it?"

"Yes, sir," said the girl, then looking up at Rico, "I know you."

"Yeah?" said Rico. "Well, do your stuff then, sister."

In the alley behind the house there was a shriek of brakes and someone cried in a loud voice:

"He went in that way!"

The girl picked up her broom and went on sweeping. Rico ran out through the front hall, down the long flight of stone steps, and crossed the street leisurely.

Ma Magdalena let him in at the alley door.

"Well, Rico," she said; "got yourself in a nice fix, didn't you?"

Rico grinned.

"Yeah," he said, "who told you?"

"The bulls were here and searched the place."

"Didn't find the hide-out, did they?"

Ma Magdalena laughed.

"What a chance!"

Rico followed Ma down into the basement. She led him through a short tunnel and back into the hideout. A small, round opening just large enough to admit one person had been pierced in a heavy stone wall. In front of the wall rows of pine shelves had been built and these were filled with canned goods. The section of the shelves which hid the opening was hinged and could be swung open.

Rico followed Ma through the opening and came out into a little room with a cot in one corner, a table and one chair. Rico took off his hat and sat down.

"They got The Greek," he said.

"Yeah?" said Ma.

Rico took out a cigar and lit it.

"Listen," he said, "I want to stay here a couple of days. Then I'm gonna pull out. Get me some magazines and keep me posted."

"All right," said Ma, "but it's gonna cost you, because I'm taking chances, see, I'm taking big chances."

"Well," said Rico, "you got my roll, help yourself."

Ma Magdalena smiled broadly.

"That's the talk, Rico. Old Ma'll sure take care of you."

"O. K.," said Rico; "now, get this: in two days I want a car."

"Arrigo's got a car. If we go hooking one, it might spoil your getaway."

"That's good," said Rico; "all right, I want a jumper suit, you know, one of them suits like a garage mechanic wears, and a razor."

"All right," said Ma Magdalena.

When she had gone Rico took off his coat and shoes, and lay down on the cot. His nerves were jumpy and he couldn't seem to get settled. He flung his cigar away and turned his face to the wall.

"Just when I thought things were on the up and up," he said. Rico felt resentful, but his resentment was not directed at any specific group or person; it was vague as yet. He turned from side to side on his cot, then he gave it up.

Ma Magdalena came back with a big mug of coffee and a couple of papers. Rico sat down at a table.

"They got Sam," said Ma.

"Well," said Rico, "that's hips for Sam."

Rico took the papers from her and glanced at the headlines.

GANG CHIEF NAMED AS SLAYER

Ma Magdalena went out. Rico sat reading the paper and sipping his coffee.

Gentleman Joe Massara looks more like a movie actor than a gunman. When arrested he was wearing an expensive Tuxedo and the rings that were taken from him are valued at $3,000.

"To tell with that," said Rico.

He read on

Cesare Bandello, known as Rico, the Vettori gang chief, was named as the actual slayer of Courtney.

"Yeah," said Rico, "and I'm the only one they ain't gonna get."

THE BUNGLE FAMILY

The Patient Is Improving

DURING A HURRIED LOOK AT THE MARKET QUOTATIONS, COLONEL BUNGLE PAID MORE ATTENTION TO THE PRICE OF GOOBER COMMON THAN HE DID TO THE DATE OF THE PAPER, AND SO INFORMATION A WEEK OLD HELPED THE PATIENT ENJOY SLEEP FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE HE WAS ORDERED TO BED FOR A REST.

EXTRA! EXTRA! GOOBER COMMON REACHES 500.
HE SNORED ALL NIGHT EVEN LOUDER THAN USUAL, AND NOW HE'S TAKING A NAP. THIS IS THE RESULT OF KEEPING HIS MIND OFF THAT OLD STOCK MARKET.
HE'S IMPROVED GREATLY SINCE YESTERDAY. THAT WORRIED LOOK IS GONE AND HE'S SMILING.

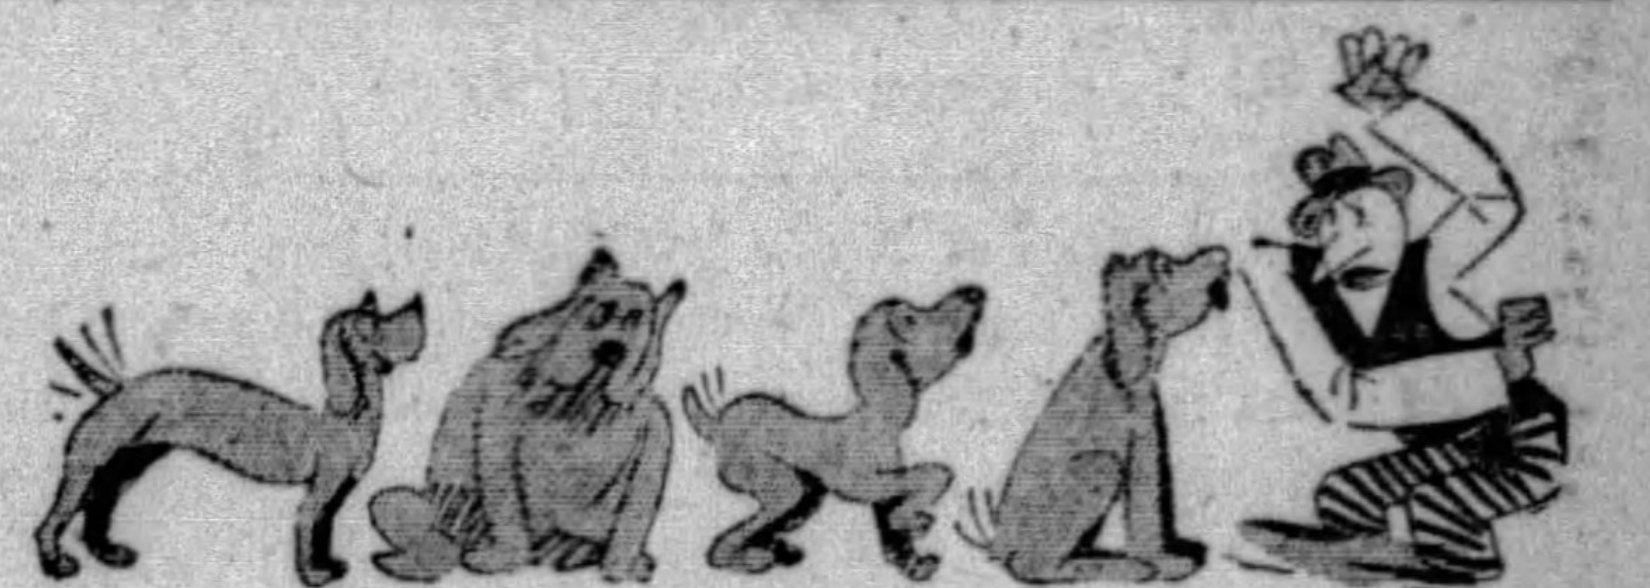
NIGHTWATCH EVILSIZER LOSES IN BATTLE OF WITS



(From the Indomitable Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

Nightwatch Evilsizer concluded to kill some dogs, Saturday evening. A bunch of the canines that frequent the square had got into the habit of following him, and otherwise making themselves nuisances. He went to the sheriff's office, got a sawed-off shotgun and shot a bulldog that lay as if he were dead as a stone. The next day he say the dog trotting about the square, as if nothing had happened. It looks like the Bull played 'possum on the nightwatch.

Dr. Baker Sees Coal As New Industry Base

An interesting article by Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, appearing in the September issue of The Carnegie Magazine, reveals an optimistic view of the future of bituminous coal and a prophesy of "an ever increasing activity and an expanding prosperity" in soft coal regions. Since Dr. Baker is no visionary, but a practical man and most competent head of an institution the purpose of which is technical education, that is education that is for practical, usable application in the contacts of life, his views are important to the Pittsburgh district.

Mr. Baker has observed the problem of soft coal and has made a study of it, seeking, perhaps, not so much a cure for its ills as an insight into possibilities of general benefit to society that have been neglected or not fully developed.

His vision of the future sees more power developed at the mouth of the mine. He doesn't say so, but it is obvious that means "shipping" weightless power instead of heavy coal. He does say that it also means gas from coal processing, formerly wasted, that will be piped to cities and used for fuel. Then there is the tar, residue in the transformation of coal to coke. This, he predicts, will be distilled near the mines "and the various stages of refining will create new enterprises out of what are now only laboratory experiments."

"Furthermore," he states, "the gases from coke ovens will be treated in various ways to produce commodities which can be used for fertilizing purposes. Chemical industries will draw more and more closely to the coal fields. The newer chemistry will bring about new industrial developments, many of which will take place in the regions where the basic material is to be found."

We believe, with Dr. Baker, that bituminous coal has a great future that needs only research and sufficient spirit of pioneering to develop into terms of enterprise, community benefit and widespread prosperity.

There is gold in the coal pits of our district.

Whoops!

Hundreds of years from now it may surprise and delight scholars who are searching for an understanding of dollar diplomacy in post-war America. They will have at hand such priceless revelations as these—

"Francine told me he was very rich and owned a lumber business. . .he came in the afternoon and immediately gave me a square box and it had in it a large green emerald . . .I would rather of had a diamond but anyway I suppose emeralds are worth a lot of money. . .I have shown the emerald to a friend who is a jeweler and he says it is worth about $20,000 . . . the lumberman brought some more jewelry, a diamond and platinum wrist watch. . .I am wondering if I am really mercenary? Perhaps I am but it is better to be mercenary than miserable."

Love is a wonderful thing.

The Epstein Theory

Squabbles Inevitable

Men in the street are again making unkind remarks about Jacob Epstein, London sculptor, who baffles them with his latest creation, "Day." And Epstein again replies that the man in the street is a fool so far as art is concerned.

Calling names is a time-honored routine for getting nowhere. Inability of the man in the street to appreciate Epstein is no great discredit to either of them. They do not understand each other. They do not want to understand each other. And they would probably be no better off if they did.

However, such squabbles are inevitable. Every self-respecting man is convinced that his own eye for beauty is not only good enough for him, but good enough for everybody else. And when his taste is questioned he cannot help but feel that something is wrong—with the other fellow.

BRODY ON BRIDGE

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

NEW YORK has its share of conventions, conferences and wholesale congresses. Its latest and happiest convention is made up exclusively of bridge experts of all shapes, sizes and technique.

"Bugs" Baer

Seventy of these vanishing American card company mechanics are in New York to take concentrated lessons from Prof. Whitehead.

This consolidates our bridge opinions into a fine mess of theoretical gelatine.

Some years ago we declared, with all the fire and ardor of a second childhood, that there were no pupils in bridge. Everybody was a teacher.

We must be wrong for these 70 experts are paying $100 each to watch Whitehead put his feather-edged shuffle on the cards.

We heard some new expressions at the convention. And we memorized them because we know they will carry social prestige in the subway.

For Einstein, we distinctly heard Prof. Whitehead refer to a passing goulash.

That's good judgment for a dyspeptic. We have passed that stuff hundreds of times without a whimper of the eyelash.

The Hungarian system of passing goulash seems to be the big business in contract bridge these sunny nights. Nobody seems to know what it means but it gets results.

Looking over these 70 bridge experts, we discover that a hermetically scaled card player is a peculiar beetle.

He runs to polka dot ties, outdoor carpet slippers and high pressure wrinkles.

He usually wears spectacles. But his eyes are so close together that he looks between the lens.

His second chin is the most important feature of his face. It denotes prosperity, no-trump and sound bidding.

Eyebrows are no longer considered good judgment. Out in Southampton, L. I., eyebrows are shaved off during bridge tournaments. This prevents the bidder from knowing whether his partner is angry or not.

When we left the convention, Prof. Whitehead and his 70 pupils were arguing about a two no-trump take-out, whatever that is.

While all this portentous business was going on, boats were going through the Panama Canal, Ramsay MacDonald was getting ready to come to America. England had evacuated the Rhineland, and an Indian had tossed another empty sardine can into the Grand Canyon.

Introducing Model D. C.

Drawn by Nelson Harding

The President has ordered that Wet Washington, D. C.,
A model Prohibition burg
And Drinkless Town shall be.

The city, then should go on wheels,
A Waterwagon sample,
And tour the land that all may see
A noble first example.

Bible Passages

Quails and Manna Sent

(Exodus 16:9-18)

AND Moses spake unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, Come near before the Lord: for he hath heard your murmurings.

And it came to pass as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the Lord appeared in the cloud.

And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying:

I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel: speak unto them, saying, At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am the Lord your God.

And it came to pass, that at even the quails came up, and covered the camp: and in the morning the dew lay round about the boat.

And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as the hoar frost on the ground.

And when the children of Israel saw it, them said one to another, It is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat.

This is the thing which the Lord hath commanded, Gather of it every man according to his eating, an omer for every man, according to the number of your persons; take ye every man for them which are in his tents.

And the children of Israel did so, and gathered some more, some less.

And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

His Daughter

SHE has come up from the shining sea
To linger on land awhile,
Fresh as the wind of the sea is she,
As the smile of the sea is her smile.

Wonder such as a child might know
Swells in her guileness phrase;
She, who was free as the winds that blow,
Stifles in city ways.

She, who was sure of the course she made,
Charting the seas aright,
Now must waver and go afraid,
Vexed by strange sound and sight.

Up from the sea, but not for long,
She who is Neptune's own;
Even now she is starved for its song,
For the joy of its undertone.

Even now she would turn away
From the promise of gold and fame
To seek the kiss of the flying spray
And the green plains whence she came.

SHOULDER-CHIP PEDDLERS

By Herbert Kaufman

A SENATE committee is taking the Battleship Lobby apart, to find what makes it tick.

The munitions octopus has gripped the world in nightmare tentacles for half a century, stimulating mutual suspicions and furnishing shoulder-chips for the various Powers.

Gun makers and cruiser builders, in common with soda-pop and soap manufacturers, must PROMOTE their markets.

They "can't do business as usual" without calling on the trade. Their particular customers, however, aren't supposed to hobnob with special pleaders.

Therefore, the opinion-shaping expert usually works behind scenes and under camouflage.

The Krupps thus exerted a dominant influence in pre-war Germany. Paid propaganda has always helped to shape British naval budgets, and the Bethlehem, Brown-Boveri, Newport News combination, followed established practice when hiring a disarmament defeatist to muddle matters at Geneva and Washington.

SELF-INTEREST has been a camp follower of war since Persian sutlers roused the jealousy of Xerxes with tales of Greek superiority, provoked an invading expedition—and sold him supplies.

It PAYS fleet builders and shell founders to keep governments distrusting each other. Then, they compete in scales of defense and place corresponding orders.

Fear throws treasuries wide open and spends like a drunken sailor.

And recent international debts indicate how much MORE money there is in peddling swords instead of plowshares.

The early Rothschilds were past masters at the game. They specialized in royal and official loans, juggled ministries and parliaments on their ledgers and gold-cured the itching palms of princes, premiers and deputies.

THEY promoted railways, navigation lines, arsenals, or what have you, and never haggled at the cost of holding the inside track.

Baron James sat like a spider in the web of French politics and snared the favor of statesmanship with regardless bribes.

The Viennese Court accepted unsecured "accommodations" from the Austrian branch of that great house, until the Empire couldn't afford to adopt a foreign policy or a fiscal program without consulting the Rothschild brothers.

They vetoed and endorsed wars as their current investments dictated.

They determined ambassadorial appointments, received advance information from puppet diplomats and guided treaty-making pens.

WHEN Spain welched on an underwriting agreement, they wrecked her Bourse.

When Vienna switched to a rival group, they spanked the Exchange until it howled for quarter.

Regiments marched and truces were declared pretty much as the five Frankfurters figured the relative yields of tranquility or feuds.

The Rothschilds aren't marking aces NOWADAYS.

But cannon and armor-plate casters are STILL dealing from the bottom of the deck—still confounding reduction conferences with under-cover agents and forced cards.

There are a thousand Shearers between here and Tokio—only the REST of 'em aren't blabbing on higher-ups.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD! ∴

By Elsie Robinson

YOU hear a lot about how wonderful it is for women to be free at last after all these ages of Male Oppression. As a matter of fact, there's plenty of evidence to prove that if there was any oppression in the world's dim dawning, US GIRLS DID IT!

Female suffrage is nothing new in the human record. Time was when the ladies corralled all the votes, bossed all the industries and the men just hung around and waited for mamma to come home.

T. Swann Harding tells about it in an article called "The Dominant Sex" in the August 14 issue of The Nation. Says he—

"In 1917 the women of New York State, after much travail and hysteria, at last achieved the right to vote. . . . But among the Iroquois tribes which inhabited that state before modern padlocking refinements were introduced, all adults, male and female, belonged to the tribal council, which gave them equal suffrage on a democratic basis. Centuries before this the women of the Senecas were electing the tribal officers and exercising the power of recall as well, when necessary. Among the Wyandottes and Hurons the clan was governed by a council composed of one man and four women; the man was elected by the four women of the council!"

Nor was that the half! Males were bounced about, shoved off in corners or sent home to mamma by their primitive mates, as fancy dictated. How did the ladies get away with it? They got away with it, according to T. Swann Harding, because MEN DIDN'T REALIZE THEIR OWN IMPORTANCE. The mother, being obviously the parent of the child, had full command of the situation—papa simply didn't rate. He was adopted into the wife's tribe, fed on the wife's charity, or kicked out, at the wife's pleasure. But when he once did realize his importance in the scheme of things, says Mr. Harding, he asserted himself and the wife took second place.

That's an interesting theory but I doubt if it's the true answer. I suspect that women, as a sex, lost their drag in antiquity for exactly the same reasons that woman, as an individual, so often loses her drag today—LAZINESS AND SILLINESS.

Why did women become chattels? Because of man's brutality? Not a bit of it! THEY BECAME CHATTELS BECAUSE THEY LIKED THE IDEA OF BEING CHATTELS, BECAUSE BEING CHATTELS LOOKED LIKE A SOFT SNAP. The role might be ignominious but it was certainly kind on the feet.

It's great to be free, but it's also hard work. When it came to wanting to take things easy, Mrs. Stonehatchet of 19,000 B. C. didn't differ a whit from Flossie Flit of 1900 A. D.

YOU CAN TAKE THINGS MIGHTY EASY IF YOU'LL TELL SOME MAN HE'S A GREAT, BIG, WONDERFUL BRUTE AND SIT BACK AND LOOK ADMIRING WHILE HE DOES HIS STUFF.

Moreover, it's a lot more thrilling and romantic to be dragged around by the hair and cooped behind bars than it is to punch a time clock and Be An Equal. There never yet was a woman, however much emancipated, who didn't have a secret yen to be some rough bozo's Piteous Victim.

If you don't believe it you should see some of the specimens that file through my office. Wife Whamming, as an indoor sport, was not confined to primitive society. It still goes strong, as abundant blacked eyes and busted noses testify. Shocking? Of course it is. Isn't there anything these poor, dear ladies can do to protect themselves? There is—plenty. But will they do it? Not on your life! When it comes right down to brass tacks they stick to their Peevish Papas. For two reasons . . . First, because it flatters their vanity. . . . Second, because it's easier than working.

And that, knowing women as I do, is my answer to How They Got That Way.

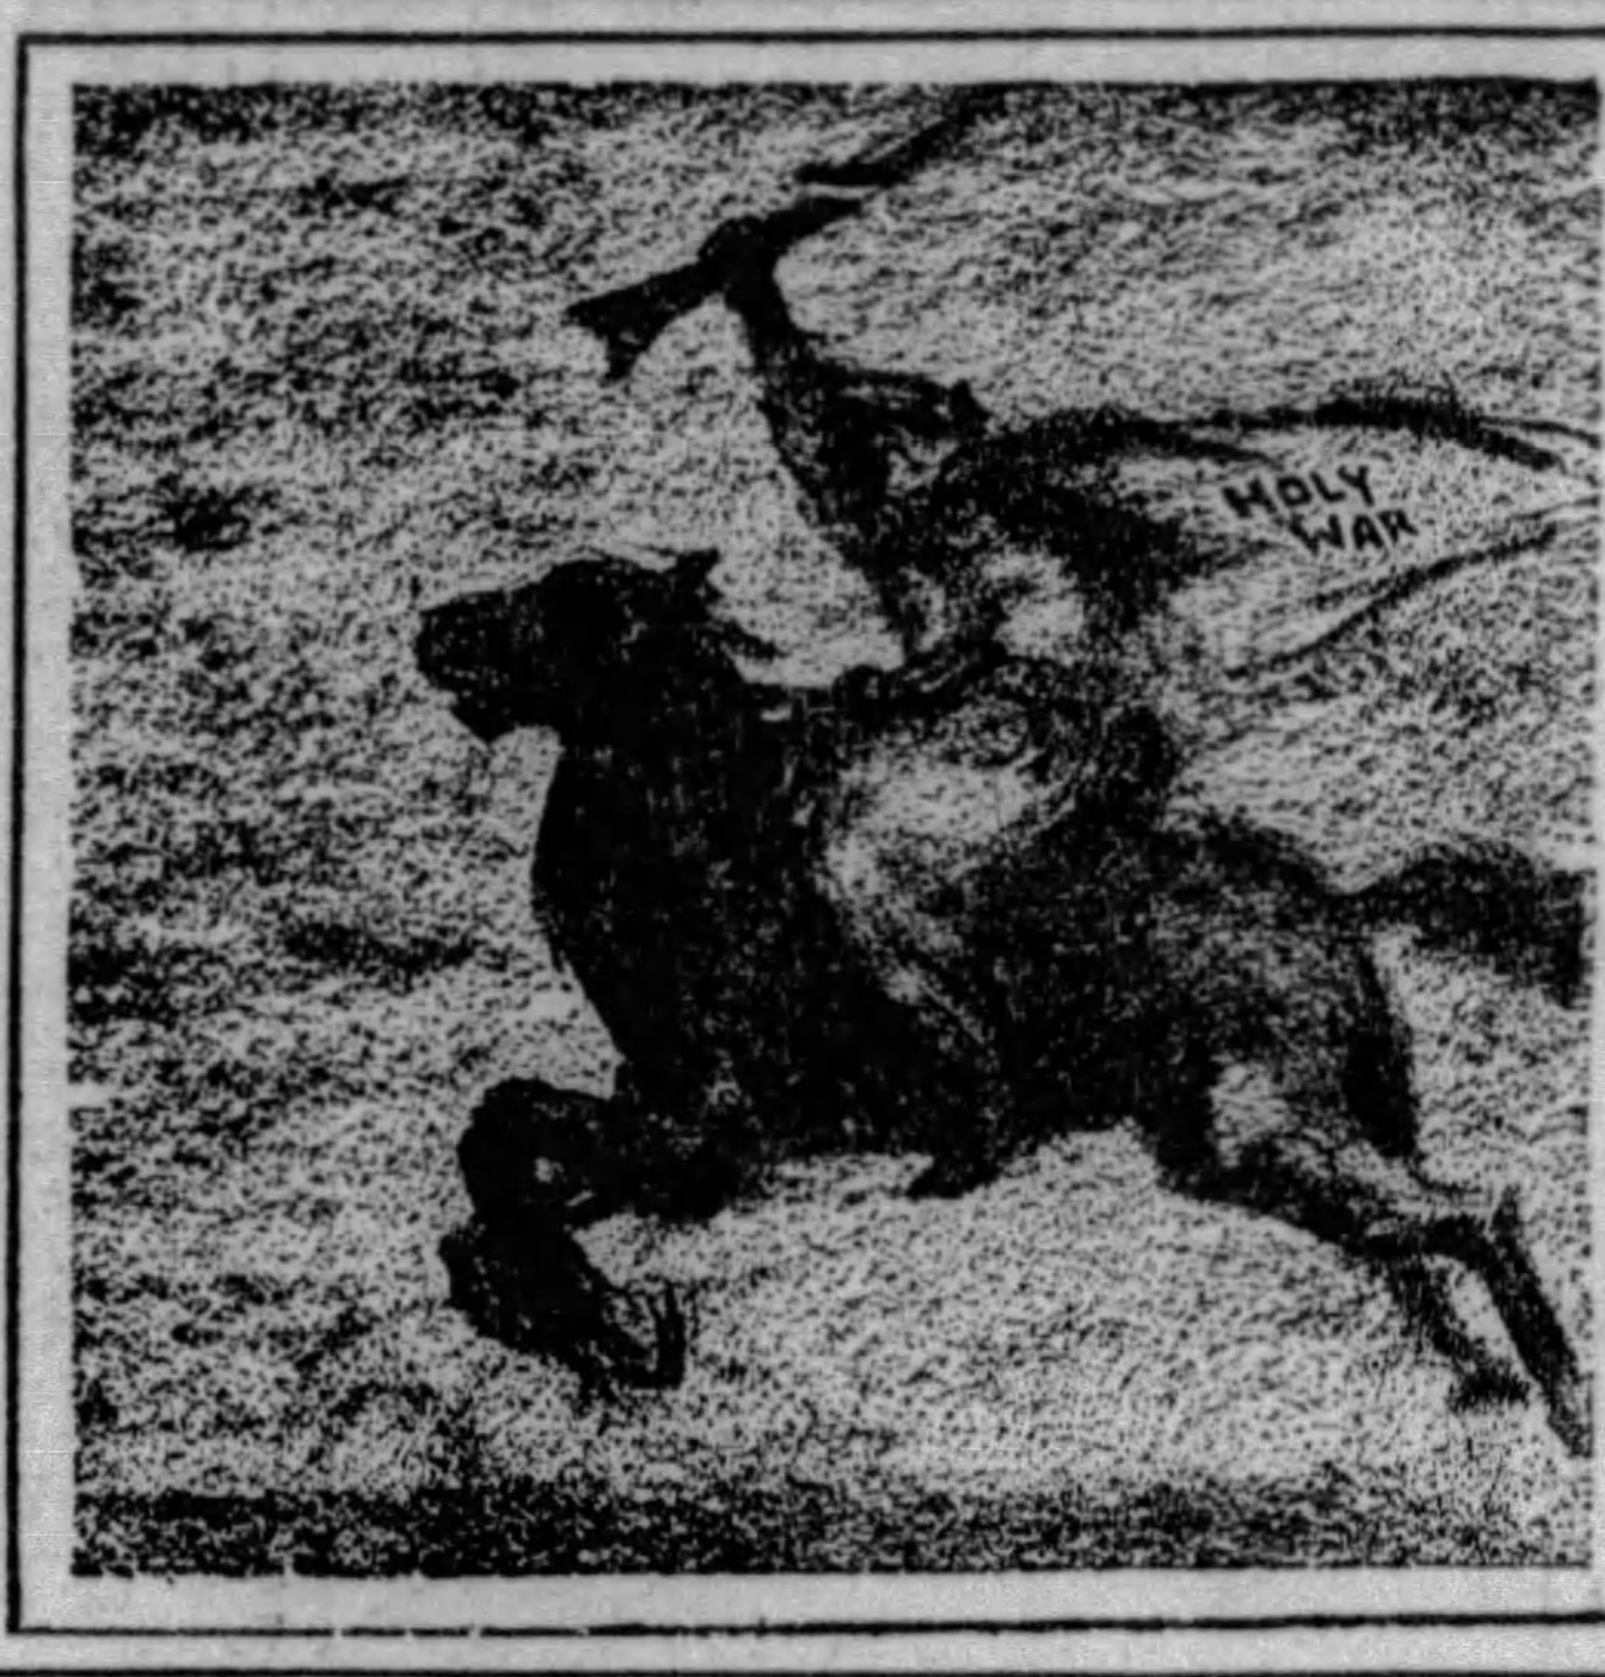
This Makes England Think

She Has Many of These



BEYOND THE JORDAN LIES INDIA

This significant picture by Fitzpatrick, published by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, shows why England proceeds cautiously in punishing Arabs, responsible for Jerusalem's outbreak and murders.

When the Arab starts one of his holy wars, he is not easily handled. All Europe found that out years ago when Mohammed put his followers on a diet of plain water, and told them that death on the battlefield meant instantaneous transportation to Paradise, where young ladies made of solid musk, highly perfumed, poured out wines that cheered, but did not inebriate. And NO WIVES ALLOWED IN.

Recently the Arabs have not done much. But the old fire, hatred and killing power is in them.

The British have many millions of Mohammedans within their empire; almost 100,000,000 of them are in India, beyond the Jordan, not far from scenes of the recent troubles.

The British want to fulfill their mandate, they want to carry out their agreement to enable Zionists to establish a Jewish nation in Palestine, where the Arabs have ruled for 1,300 years.

But they don't want to stir up another holy war.

In India, at present, the British rule comfortably, because nearly three hundred million Hindus hate the millions of Mohammedans as much as the Mohammedans hate them. While the two religions hate each other, the clever British can rule easily.

If Mohammedans and Hindus, led by the former, ever united, that would be an end of British India.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—No one seems to know the exact whereabouts of Guido Bruno, so long linked with the deep-thinking side of Greenwich Village. The same vagrant winds wafting Tiny Tim, Grace Goodwin and others to far away corners seem to have carried Bruno off.

Suddenly the presiding genius of the village's "intellectual soul" was missing from the coffee shops and waffle parlors. His book shop was shuttered. Those who know say he intimated receiving another call of adventure. He offered no further explanation.

Bruno's dingy little attic book shop in a tumble-down frame building offered an antiquated touch to the south side of Washington Square. He was, himself, the born romanticist looking eagerly at life through rose colored glasses and with his head knocking the stars—a true illusionist.

When the jangle of commerce began to be heard in Village streets, Bruno held fast to his raggy dreams. He was godfather to the seedy and poetic starvelings, and more than any other person inspired the flaming torch that gave the Village its halo of magnificent imaginings.

The Village for 10 years in reality has not been the irresponsible Bohemia of Sunday writers. But Bruno fanned the myth into occasional spurts of flame. He spun wistful webs through the narrow, crooked streets that had once been addresses of the great.

He was the born hero-worshiper. Few paid much attention to the Japanese writer Sadakichi Hartman until Bruno began clashing the cymbals. It was Hartman's "Christ" that sent the Italian enthusiast through the streets shouting until he was heard in Park Row.

He prostrated himself at the feet of the literary firebrand Frank Harris when the latter's melancholy days arrived. Harris' dreams had frozen. His magazine was a mess and he had become an embittered, querulous old man. But Bruno swaggered forth to cheer him. A great spirit, Bruno!!

Save along Broadway, most people think George M. Cohan is a Jew. A returning theatrical producer tells that among a group in the ship's smoking room, 14 out of 15 thought Cohan was of Hebrew origin. Cohan's name is George Michael and his father Jerry was a celebrated Irish comedian. Yet Cohan, an Irishman, is Abbott of the Friars, an organization largely of Jewish actors.

The three important theatrical clubs are The Players, The Lambs and the Friars. The Players occupy the old home of Edwin Booth in Gramercy Park and which appears freighted with solitude and dignity. It is frequented largely by the profession of another day with a sprinkling of artists and writers. The Lambs and Friars accent a more pronounced good fellowship and there is a spirited rivalry between them.

The Players is the rendezvous of the gayest wit of the Nineties—Oliver Herford. His epigrams always epped and his humor frequently convulses the staid sanctuary. He has none of the flip wisecracking qualities of Broadway clowns. His wit is the subtle sort likely to send a listener into gales of laughter next day. Herford is the most widely quoted American humorist in Europe.

The heigh ho-est of clubs is doubtless the Metropolitan—known as the Millionaire Club and standing sedately on the upper avenue. Its windows reveal crisply white mustached gentlemen generally up to their ears in financial pages. Its waiting list includes all the aristocracy now in rompers. To be admitted five years after application is an achievement.

An orator in New York's mayoralty campaign shouts there is one law for the rich and one for the poor. But how many for us middle class suckers?

Just this morning I was brusquely ordered to move on from the steps of my own hotel and did so without even a mutter. The triumph of mind over MUTTER!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

EVEN though you may be good friends, don't intrude on the privacy of a family in which there has been a death. At such a time the family and relatives wish to be alone.

It is well to call at the home and offer to attend to certain little things that you know should be looked after.

But it is annoying to have many—other than the immediate family—around the home during bereavement.

Frequently it springs from selfish desires.

Not infrequently it is the result of morbid curiosity.

Certain persons visit homes of affliction to be able to retail to eager listeners facts about the house or actions of members of the family.

There is a growing tendency to do away with the practice of relatives going to the cemetery.

Those who are old and feeble should not be allowed to expose themselves to weather conditions which may bring serious results.

But after all it is the heart that decides, not expediency.

Respect the family that wishes privacy at the burial of loved ones.
